COL. ROOSEVELT ASKS RECIPROCITY, ALSO CANAL FORTS

Former President at Union League Banquet Indorses Two Taft Policies.

AIMS AT THE TREATY'S FOES

Criticises National Legislators Who Oppose Proposed Agreement with Canada.

JOINS APPONYI ON "PEACE"

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, vigorously advocated reciprocity with Canada, urged progressive policies on the country in general and the Republican party in particular, whooped it up for universal peace and in the next breath went on record for double-barreled fortification of the Panama canal, argued for better control of corporations, dipped into the history of George Washington's life, touched up labor interests and capitalistic concerns and threw in a little sentiment on the side—all in an address delivered before the members of the Union League club last night. The occasion was the club's twenty-fifth annual celebration of the birthday of the father of his country.

It was the ninth function in which the former president participated within the space of twenty-four hours. He has been the guest of the Union League club since Tuesday afternoon and will start back to New York this morning.

Boosts Reciprocity Treaty.

In trenchant terms he expressed his disapproval of all who opposed the enactment of the reciprocity treaty. His attack was particularly directed against those who sought to block the treaty because of the claim that it was a step toward annexation.

"It is the business of this nation," he said, "to closely cement the friendship between it and the great growing country to the north. No other relation is in any way anticipated than a better adjustment of commercial relations."

Count Apponyi addressed the club members and their friends on the subject of universal peace, and said that it fell to the lot of the United States to lead the way. Col Roosevelt said that when he was president he had done more than the head of any other nation in furtherance of the universal peace project.

Urges Canal Fortification.

He made a scathing and sarcastic denunciation of opposition to a fortification of the Panama canal.

"A nation cannot be blamed for attempting a big job, but it can be blamed for beginning a big task and then being afraid to finish it," he said. "Are we to occupy the position that China does in that her enemies would pounce upon her if they could agree as to division of the spoils? That will be just our position after the canal is completed if we fail to fortify it. It would be a proper war move for any other nation to seize it if that nation had drawn swords against us."

He said that he hoped the time soon would come when the government had a better control of the people's interest in the great corporations.

Approves Taft Moves.

The colonel then plunged into the subject of his address as follows:

"I want to call your attention to two practical services for peace which at this moment the president of the United States, President Taft, is rendering, in the first place, by his advocacy of reciprocity with Canada.

"I not only believe in that on economic grounds but I believe in it because I feel it should be a cardinal object of our policy to strengthen in every way the relations of amity and mutual self-respect between us and our great and prosperous and growing neighbor to the north.

"And I am sure that you share with me the feeling of profound disapprobation for those members of congress who have indirectly sought to bar the path, not only to the present and to the proposed reciprocity agreement, but to bar the path to good feeling between us and Canada, by introducing in congress resolutions pretending to look toward the annexation of Canada. I say pretending, because those resolutions were obviously introduced in bad faith.

"The introducers knew perfectly well that there was not the chance of their passage because there is not a serious thought in this country of having any relations with Canada excepting the relations based on an absolute mutuality of respect and of kindly and friendly feeling.

"And they were introduced in what I can only call a very mean spirit, the desire to do petty mischief to people in one's own country with whom they politically disagree at the moment, by causing a possible serious estrangement and misunderstanding in the foreign relations of this country with a friendly power.

Takes Up Subject of Panama.

"The other service of which I speak is a service, a real service as distinguished from a nominal service for peace, and that is the proposal to fortify the Panama canal.

"Now, it is allowable for a country to undertake a big job if it feels that it is a big country and can do it, or it is allowable for it to say—it is not pleasant, but it is allowable—that it does not believe that it is a big country and it won't undertake a big job. But the thing that is unpardonable is to undertake a big job and then not do it.

"Now, if we were content to say that in the world of the occident we would like to occupy the proud position now held by China in the orient, and to owe our safety to the fact that the people who would like to prey upon us could not agree how they would divide the booty—if we wished to take that position, then it would be proper to have re-

WARNS AGAINST 'LORIMER MAYOR'

Merriam Aids Issue Circular Declaring Thompson's Election Would Put Senator at Head of the City.

PLEA TO THE SIXTH WARD

Point to Candidate's Alleged Lobbying to Win Toga for the "Blond Boss" and Mayoralty Promise for Work.

"Do you voters of Chicago want William Lorimer for your mayor? That is who you'll have if you get John R. Thompson."

The relations of Mayoralty Candidate Thompson and Senator Lorimer, introduced with this quotation, are the subject of a four page leaflet issued yesterday from the campaign headquarters of Ald. Charles E. Merriam in the Grand Pacific hotel. It is entitled "Thompson," and the matter was calculated to stir the Republican combatants even more than did the leaflet devoted to the Ogden gas record of John F. Smulski when Mr. Smulski was an alderman.

Indications that the document was framed with an eye to the Sixth ward, where Mr. Thompson lives, were seen in the following paragraph:

"Republicans of the Sixth ward who have felt assured that the ward had been finally and forever rescued from the control of William Lorimer are entitled to know that their present leader long ago betrayed them, as he betrayed his former associates in the old Thirty-fourth ward when a vision of power tempted him. John R. Thompson, advertised as a 'business man in politics,' has been in the business of politics for ten or twelve years and never has he hesitated to turn his back upon those who have been fighting for principle and right policies in the Republican party."

Asks Thompson About Lorimer.

Inside political history is introduced into the leaflet, which promises to become a battle center of the campaign. Here are some of its most striking parts:

"Who is John R. Thompson? Who are his political intimates? He is keeping strangely silent about his friends. He has not said a single word about his close relations with William Lorimer.

"No Lorimer man can be elected mayor of Chicago. If the Republican party nominates one, he will go down to sure defeat at the polls in April. Mr. Thompson before embarking on his present campaign for the Republican nomination announced over and over that he would not run unless Lorimer would assure his support. He must have got it, for he is running.

"Let us examine the record and see how he switched back and forth as a Lorimer and anti-Lorimer man at the outset of his political career, and how he subsequently settled down steadily to bear the Lorimer banner, which he still bears.

"John R. Thompson first became known in politics in the old Thirty-fourth ward, now the Seventh, over ten years ago. At that time a fight was being made by clean Republicans against the so-called Lorimer-Jamieson machine. The boss of the machine at that time was 'Doc' Jamieson, under lord of William Lorimer, and Mr. Thompson was an active opponent.

Tells of Switching to Lorimer.

"A bitter war had developed over the president of the Republican ward club. Between two days, Thompson turned on his comrades and blossomed forth as the Lorimer-Jamieson candidate for president of the club. He was elected by the tactics then in vogue.

"Thompson now became a close friend of 'Doc' Jamieson, and was promised the nomination for congress in place of James R. Mann. Jamieson made the promise, according to Thompson.

"However, Mann was renominated, whereupon Thompson turned again against his recently cultivated ally, 'Doc' Jamieson, to whose ward, the Sixth, he had moved.

"He joined with those who were fighting Jamieson, and they made him county central committeeman from the Sixth ward, which leadership he has held ever since. He obtained this position only because he was believed to be a stanch anti-Lorimer-Jamieson man, and he still is in control of Republican politics there, because the people of the Sixth ward have not awakened to the fact that for a third time Thompson switched and he now is one of the closest personal and political friends Lorimer has in Illinois, and has been since soon after he wrested 'Doc' Jamieson's position from the latter for himself.

Puts Thompson in "Lorimer Lobby."

"Now take a peek at what happened in Springfield when Lorimer was elected to the United States senate.

"John R. Thompson went to the state capital and lobbied for two days actively and earnestly for his friend Lorimer. When came the date set for the breaking of the deadlock and the election of Lorimer, Thompson commanded Representatives Oliver Sollitt and William Tudor ApMadoc of the Third and Fifth Senatorial districts, respectively, to vote for Lorimer, and they did so. He was active also in lining up other votes for Lorimer.

"After Lorimer was elected Thompson's joy was so great that it sought expression at a champagne supper given that night to the friends and admirers of Lorimer. Here Thompson sat cheek by jowl with Lorimer, exchanging felicitations.

"The following day there was much blatant talk of 'a new lineup in politics,' with John R. Thompson's star in the ascendency, and it was announced then that, for his support of Lorimer, Thompson would be the senator's candidate for mayor to succeed Busse.

Puts County Money in His Bank.

"Now look at the business relation of Thompson and his chief, the junior senator from Illinois.

"Shortly after Lorimer opened his bank here John R. Thompson, then treasurer of Cook county, deposited a large sum of the county's money in the bank.

"During the recent visits of Lorimer to Chicago, Thompson had numerous conferences with him, at which the topic was always whether Thompson should run for mayor. The last time Lorimer was here—Saturday, Feb. 11—Thompson called on him at the senator's bank and discussed the subject. Immediately thereafter the Lorimer

Suggestion to Exclude Them from London School Library Because of Their "Lack of Refinement."

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A subcommittee of the education committee of the London county council presented a report today containing a revised list of books for the school lending library.

Among the books struck off the list by the subcommittee are biographies of Abraham Lincoln, Benjamin Franklin, and George Washington, and the book, "From Log Cabin to White House."

John Dennison Pender of the committee explained that the books were regarded as objectionable on account of "their extreme lack of refinement, and also because they were written in American, and extremely vulgar American at that."

The report was referred back to the subcommittee.

He refused to issue a proclamation closing the city hall, though banks and stores were closed. He said he proclaimed a legal holiday on Labor day, because labor is greater than any man who ever lived.

James Hamilton Lewis of Pink Adornment Says Razors Make Men Cruel.

SHUNS BALDHEAD DEBATE

"Resolved, That whiskers have contributed more to civilization than baldness of statesmen."

This is the subject of the next debate at the Washington Press club.

"Really, my dear sir, it covers me with embarrassment to be asked to contribute my ideas upon a subject that relates so closely to myself," said James Hamilton Lewis as he turned in his swivel chair meditatively to face the window of his apartment. The late afternoon sun streamed in upon him and set off to full advantage his luxurious pink possession. His caressing fingers combed through the silken hairs as he continued.

"Ah! believe me, my modesty forbids that I should number myself in that great company of bearded men who have written the historical chapters of civilization. It is quite contrary to my nature to seek glory when it is reflected only in my personal appearance.

Bearded Men Excel in Arts.

"But how true it is that the men who have contributed to the civilization of the world, those who have been the exponents and have excelled in the more refined arts, literature, art, music, philosophy, yes, and statesmanship, have been men like myself, who, endowed by nature with that manly adornment, have permitted nature to take its course. One only has to walk through the galleries of Rome, Athens, Paris, Berlin, Munich, Vienna, or London to see there reproduced in everlasting marble the physiognomies of men whose works live today as a cultivating influence and esthetic impulse.

"Let me see if I can name offhand some of this illustrious company. Greece produced such men as Plato, Socrates, and Theocritus. All wore beards. In modern times we have had such men as Ben Jonson, Ruskin, Browning, Greeley, Lowell, the great Lincoln—who, after he became president, grew a beard while he acquired a softness of nature and a new refinement—then there was Clarence Stedman, Longfellow, and there is George Bernard Shaw of our own time. All these men have done something to ameliorate the crudeness of the aboriginal instincts that throb in the breasts of humanity.

Smooth Shaven "Cold and Cruel."

"On the other hand, and merely to establish more firmly our argument, permit me to remind you that our warriors, our great generals, our men who demonstrated their power by the sword, who lived in carnage and bloodshed—most uncivilising, I assure you—were those who habitually used the razor. Look at Cæsar and Napoleon, smooth shaven and cruel. Look at Cromwell and Wellington.

"I truly regret that my engagements are such, and further, that I am no longer in public life, so that I cannot lend my feeble arguments to the debate in affirming that 'Whiskers have contributed to civilization.'"

ELOPING GIRL QUITS SPOUSE; HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE.

Chicago Young Woman Loses Husband in New York, Where He Is Arrested on Sister's Complaint.

Mrs. Estelle Relewitz Chester, daughter of Nicholas F. Relewitz, connected with the law department of the Illinois Steel company, after a honeymoon of less than a week, is on her way back to Chicago, disillusioned and with the distressing fact staring her in the face that her husband is under arrest. He is charged with having stolen the money which paid for their wedding trip.

Victor Chester, the groom, is held in New York City, charged with robbing his cousin, Miss Margaret Voght, 734 Temple street, Chicago, of $400 and a lot of jewelry, as well as two red neckties. Mrs. Chester has packed her suit case and will rejoin her parents, who live at 2083 Thomas street.

She eloped with Chester last Thursday, while her mother and sisters were shopping. They were married by a justice of the peace.

Mr. Relewitz, the father of the girl, who is only 18 years old, said last night that he has been informed that Chester has a wife and child in Chicago, and that he has not been divorced.

Chester lived with his parents at 734 Temple street, which was also the home of his cousin.

FIFTEEN HURT IN WRECK OF CHICAGO-COAST TRAIN.

Passengers Are Victims When Santa Fe Flyer, East Bound, Goes Into Ditch in New Mexico.

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 22.—Fifteen passengers are reported injured in the wreck of Santa Fé train No. 2, the eastbound Los Angeles-Chicago tourist flyer. The accident occurred at Garcia, forty-five miles west of here, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

While traveling at high speed the train struck a broken rail. The smoking car, day coach, and three Pullman sleepers went into the ditch, one of the cars being broken in two.

A relief train was dispatched from here and the injured are being brought to Albuquerque.

COUNTESS SMOKES; IS EJECTED.

Succeeds in Being Ordered from Blackstone, Then Denies It Is Press Agent Trick.

Countess Thamara de Swirsky, Russian danseuse and "motion interpreter of classic music," went to two hotels last evening bent upon smoking cigarets in the dining rooms.

She succeeded in being ejected from the Blackstone hotel, but at the Sherman house she obeyed the warning of the house detectives after an early refusal.

That the stunt was a frameup by her and her press agent was denied vehemently by the countess, who bristled with artistic Russian anger when "interviewed" in her room at the Sherman house.

MOTORISTS HURT; CRASH INTO A CAR

Shattered Glass Slashes Faces, Heads, and Bodies of Mrs. C. Churan and Daughter.

HURLED TO PAVEMENT.

Disfiguring scars are the threatened result of injuries incurred in an automobile accident last night by Mrs. Charles A. Churan, 519 Surf street, and her 14 year old daughter, Blossom.

The machine carrying them struck a car near Wrightwood avenue and North Clark street, and flying pieces of glass cut deep wounds in the scalps and cheeks of the two. They are the wife and daughter of the attorney for the Lincoln Park board.

Mrs. Churan received eight severe cuts on the scalp and face. Her right wrist also was fractured. Her daughter has seven deep wounds on the face. Her left arm is sprained and her left leg was lacerated. Both mother and daughter were badly bruised.

Chauffeur Also Injured.

Philo Graves, 4201 Lake avenue, the chauffeur, received a four inch cut in his left leg below the knee, which went to the bone.

The accident occurred about 8:30. The scene is not more than a hundred feet from the North Chicago hospital, 2551 North Clark street, where the three injured persons were carried.

The automobile was going south at a fair rate of speed and was on the wrong side of the street, it is said. It collided with a northbound car near the point where Clark street makes a slight turn. The car and the automobile came together head-on, and the latter was almost demolished by the impact. The driver was thrown beneath his machine. Mrs. Churan and her daughter also were hurled to the pavement.

Doctors Are Summoned.

Drs. Lindsey A. Benton and Charles M. McKenna were summoned from their offices nearby. Mrs. Churan and the chauffeur were taken to the hospital. The wounds of the girl were dressed in the office of Dr. Beaton, 2573 North Clark, and she was then taken to the ward where her mother lay.

Dr. Beaton said the wounds on the girl's face probably will leave scars. Mrs. Churan was attended by Dr. McKenna, who said she may have a slight fracture of the skull. Both mother and daughter may have suffered internal injuries.

At the Churan residence it was learned that Attorney Churan was in Springfield in the interest of a bill that the park board is supporting. He was notified of the accident and took the first train for Chicago.

The automobile was demolished by the collision. The police at the Sheffield avenue station asserted the machine was the property of Julius Schwill, 4430 Drexel boulevard. At the Schwill residence at night Mrs. Schwill asserted that their car was in a repair shop, and this could not be the one. She said she did not know Philo Graves, the driver.

LORIMER'S APPEAL RINGS IN SENATE; EVADES CHARGES

Denies, Defends Career, Pleads Friendships, but Fails to Explain Bribe Confessions.

PLEA TO DEMOCRATIC EARS

Regularity as a Republican and Kindliness to Opposing Party Are His Twin Arguments.

VOTE ON CASE NOT YET IN SIGHT

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—William Lorimer made an adroit appeal to the senate today to retain him by a bipartisan combination as a member of its chamber.

It was such an appeal as Senator Mitchell of Oregon made in the senate on Jan. 17, 1905, when he proclaimed his innocence of the charge of violating the statute which inhibits a member of congress from participating in profit from law practice before any department of the government. While Mitchell was speaking he was engaging in a plot to remove evidence incriminating him. His conduct was subsequently exposed, and he was convicted, dying before final action was taken by the courts.

When Mitchell concluded, many of his auditors were weeping, senators grouped about him shaking his hand, and many in the chamber who had believed him guilty were convinced of his innocence.

Tears and Cheers Mingle.

So with Lorimer today. When he finished his four hours' address Senator Tillman's cheeks were wet with tears, Senator Hale of Maine applauded him, Senator Bailey of Texas congratulated him, and members of the house who had listened to his defense extended him their cordial wishes that he should retain the seat he holds.

But there was not a senator in the chamber, not a spectator in the crowded galleries who knew the facts, that did not appreciate that Mr. Lorimer had failed absolutely to establish that his election was not procured as the result of bribery and corruption.

Not only did he contradict himself, but he made a number of statements directly at variance with the record of the testimony taken by the senate investigating committee, and he deliberately and carefuly avoided any discussion of the confessions of White and Holstlaw and the damaging admissions of Beckemeyer and Link that money was paid to them following the casting of their vote for him for the United States senate. The case did not reach a vote and it is not expected that it will today.

His Three Pronged Appeal.

Mr. Lorimer sought in three ways to obtain votes for his retention in the senate:

FIRST, by announcing himself as a stalwart Republican and as an adherent and follower of Senator Aldrich.

SECOND, by pointing out to Democrats that he had never denounced the Democratic party as his predecessor, Senator Hopkins, had done, that he had always been kind to Democrats in the distribution of patronage, that Democrats always had worked with and for him, and by dwelling upon the fact that one of his Democratic supporters had been a confederate general.

THIRD, by claiming that his championship of the deep waterway movement had gained for him such popular approval in Illinois that Democrats would have voted for him for any office, even that of President of the United States.

Huge Audience Present.

Mr. Lorimer spoke to an audince such as few men have had in the history of any country. Almost every senator was in his seat. Grouped in the rear of the chamber was a quarter of the membership of the house of representatives, many of whom were his friends or the supporters of Speaker Cannon. The galleries, including the diplomatic gallery, were filled to their capacity, and through the open doors were lines of people listening intently to the strident tones in which Mr. Lorimer proclaimed his innocence.

The speech—as a deft and adroit appeal—was far more forcible than the address he delivered in his defense last spring. Today he was aroused to a pitch of passion and intensity not evident in the earlier plea in his own defense.

His Friendship with Hinky Dink.

Here on the floor of the senate, in the vortex of one of the most sensational cases in the history of the country, he told at length and graphically his forty year friendship with "Hinky Dink."

Then he traced his political relationships with various men who voted for him in the legislature, and through it all he dwelt now and again on his struggles and his poverty. Once in his speech these references brought an outburst from Senator Crawford of South Dakota that Mr. Lorimer was not the only boy who had made his way through hardships to the senate of the United States.

"I am not pleading I am the only one," Mr. Lorimer shouted, and with gesticulation, "nor am I pleading poverty and hard knocks as a reason why I should sit in the senate. I am not pleading for sympathy; I do not want sympathy."

The intense speech, delivered before a remarkable concourse of people, becomes one of the spectacular incidents of a case filled with thrilling incident.

Contrast in His Utterances.

In a speech he made in the senate of Jan. 9, less than six weeks ago, Mr. Lorimer said:

"Mr. President, because of what I know of my election to the senate, knowing that I was not elected by bribery and corruption, and that no person was guilty of corrupt practices in my election, I feel that I am obligated to the state which I represent in part in this body, and to myself, to be present in this chamber during the discussion."

Today he declined to go so far. He said he "did not believe" corruption brought about his election.

"I say again on my word as a man and on my word as senator," he declared passionately, "that I am not guilty and that I have no knowledge, and that I had no knowledge in the remotest degree, that bribery and corruption were practiced in securing a seat for me in this body. And I do not believe, no matter what THE TRIBUNE says, no matter what they have been able to do through coercion in the state's attorney's office in my county—I do not believe that votes were bought by anybody to send me to this body."

Sheds No New Light.

So far as any new light upon the methods practiced in connection with election are concerned Mr. Lorimer shed none.

Had he submitted himself to cross examination by taking the stand before the investigating committee he could have been questioned upon many points which he refused to speak upon. He could have been asked about his daily and hourly conferences with Lee O'Neil Browne, about the statement of Representative Shephard that he secured an absolute promise from Lorimer direct, before he promised Lorimer to vote for him; about his activities in connection with other members of the legislature; and about a thousand and one other matters which appear in the testimony taken by the committee.

Deneen Could Have Been Called.

It would have been possible—had Lorimer testified—for Gov. Deneen to have been called in rebuttal. Indeed, the name of Gov. Deneen was presented by counsel for THE TRIBUNE to the committee, which was told that he could disprove statements made by Lorimer in his speech of May 28 last replying to charges filed against him—a speech similar to that Mr. Lorimer delivered today.

The committee at that time said such testimony was immaterial unless Lorimer testified, and declined to summon the governor.

Today Senator Crawford asked Mr. Lorimer why Mr. Deneen had not been called, to which the junior member from Illinois replied that it was not for him to make suggestions to the committee, although he well knew that his counsel had presented a list of witnesses to the committee.

Moreover, it is a matter of common knowledge that Mr. Lorimer was in frequent consultation with Senator Burrows.

Mr. Lorimer also claimed in his speech that neither he nor any one for him had ever spoken to a senator in his behalf, and yet there are few in Washington who have been following the case who are not aware of the fact that Edward Hines, representative of the Weyerhaeuser interests, and other men representing corporations, have been active for his retention in the senate. Indeed, while Mr. Lorimer was speaking Mr. Hines, seated in the gallery, was following with the utmost eagerness every word he uttered.

It was, of course, impossible to conduct any kind of a cross examination of Mr. Lorimer today. Mr. Lorimer insisted he had no objection to being questioned, but Senator Burrows suggested that he should be permitted to make his statements in order, and then at the close he might be interrogated. Senator Crawford was the only member of the senate to interrupt Mr. Lorimer, and he was justified in so doing since he and Senator Root of New York were the special targets of the Lorimer vehemence.

His Series of Topics.

At the outset of his remarks Mr. Lorimer announced that he proposed to address himself to the following questions:

Did I organize the Illinois assembly against Hopkins?

Did I make Shurtleff speaker in order that I might be elected senator?

Did I make Lee O'Neil Browne minority leader?

Was Lee O'Neil Browne my agent, my corrupt agent?

Why did I stay in Springfield during the senatorial contest?

Why did I sit in the speaker's room?

For what purpose did I talk there with Shephard?

Why did the Democrats vote for me?

Mr. Lorimer answered all these questions at least to his own satisfaction except that in reference to Shephard.

Didn't Explain This Testimony.

Apparently he thought it wise not to enter into an explanation of the following testimony given by Shephard:

"I said, 'Mr. Lorimer, I have been asked to vote for you for United States senator.' I said, 'I am a rock ribbed Democrat, and always have been, and there is only one thing in this world that could induce me to vote for you for United States senator, and that would be to prevent the editor in Jerseyville, who has maligned me for nine or ten years in his newspaper and who now is a candidate for the postoffice, from obtaining the postoffice. He is the deputy now,' I told him. 'The gentleman's name is Richards, who is the postmaster.' And I included them in it. I said, 'If you will promise me that neither Mr. Richards nor Mr. Becker shall be made postmaster, I will vote for you,' he said. 'I will promise you to do all in my power to prevent them from being appointed.' I said, 'Will it be up to you in making the appointments?' He said, 'I shall certainly have my share of the patronage if I am elected senator, and there is no doubt but that I can fulfill my promise to you.' I said, 'I will vote for you, Mr. Lorimer, for senator'; and I took my seat, and when the roll was called I voted for Mr. Lorimer."

Q.—You relied on that promise, did you? A.—I did, and I am relying on it yet.

Q.—And that was the consideration? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—It was the moving cause for your voting for Mr. Lorimer? A.—Yes, sir; absolutely the only cause.

Asserts Deneen Beat Hopkins.

And yet in his speech Mr. Lorimer sought to give the impression that Mr. Shephard voted for him because of the friendship inspired by their association in connection with the deep waterway proposition.

Mr. Lorimer claimed it was not necessary for him to organize the Illinois assembly against Hopkins, who was a candidate for reelection, because Hopkins was defeated on the first ballot. He insisted that Hopkins was beaten by Deneen and not by himself. As a matter of fact, every one in Illinois knows the hostility of Lorimer toward Hopkins, and Lorimer could not hide his feeling today, since he dwelt rancorously upon the "bitter and partisan tongue" of the former senator.

Lorimer explains his presence in Springfield during the session of the legislature when he was elected by the claim that he went there to secure legislation to carry out the constitutional amendment in reference to the deep waterway project.

Conflict with Earlier Speech.

In his speech of last May, however, he used this expression:

"In the outset I want to say that when I became interested in the senatorial contest, I was in no sense of the word a candidate for senator. I entered into the contest with what was left of the Republican organization, to make a last stand against THE TRIBUNE newspaper combination. . . . What to do or how to do it we did not know. There was only a handful left, but there was one thing we were sure we could count on, and that was that we would all stand or fall together. . . . Our friends merely took advantage of the fact that they were only ostensibly supporting the senator [Hopkins] while, like Micawber, they were waiting for something to turn up."

And today Lorimer could not conceal the fact, in spite of his statement to the contrary, that the waterway matter was only a part of the business in which he engaged in Springfield.

Urged Deneen for Senator.

"I talked with the governor," he said, "and labored with him until along about the 15th of March [the senatorial election was May 26], and about that time, he [Deneen] thought he could take the place."

These efforts continued until March 23, he and Roy West, "devoting our time, trying to put him [Deneen] in this body, and not to elect Lorimer to it. When the governor refused to be a candidate, I consulted him about many other men."

Indeed, Lorimer claimed Deneen as his sponsor for the senatorship. He said Mr. Deneen instructed his followers to vote for his, Lorimer's, candidacy and subsequently canceled this instruction. Many of them refused, however, to go back on their word.

Mr. Lorimer insisted he could not have organized the legislature though he modestly admitted his ability to organize the deep waterway movement and displayed with pride a volume containing 50,000 names of persons whom he induced to support this project.

Shows Deneen "Without Power."

To show that Deneen has no standing in the state, he said that his majority in 1908 was 23,000. while that of Mr. Taft for the presidency was 179,000 and the vote for the constitutional amendment respecting the waterway was close to 500,000. Mr. Lorimer did not tell how he knifed Deneen in that campaign.

Senator Lorimer uttered this expression:

"I have stated that I knew something about my election to this body, and I have stated what I knew about it, and what I have stated to you is the truth. and even THE TRIBUNE will not dare to refute the statement that these thirty-four Democrats voted for me for the reason that I have stated to you, and that they secured the balance of the Democratic vote and instead of Lee O'Neil Browne, who was friendly to me and who did help me, and to whom I am obligated—instead of him delivering these fifty-three Democratic votes to me when I was elected United States senator, they, with their influence, with their talk, with their persuasion, delivered to me Lee O'Neil Browne, if there was any delivery of anybody at any time during my election."

Conflict with Browne Testimony.

Mr. Lorimer did not refer today to Browne as he did in his speech of last May, as "a strong, high minded, God fearing, honorable man." But as he continued to stand by Mr. Browne, the following quotation from the latter's testimony is pertinent:

"I told him, and I told them both (Shurtleff and Lorimer), that I should rely upon their word, their words as men, to see to it that no roll call was started for the election of Mr. Lorimer as senator until enough votes all told were secured. . . . I told them that none would be cast with my consent until that time.

"'Was your consent asked?'

"A.—I was consulted or consulted myself with every one of the men that did vote for him. . . . I did finally assure him that there would be thirty Browne Democrats vote for him. . . . I told them that, according to my best information that I could gather from talking with the members, that there would be thirty Browne Democrats that would vote for him."

Won Votes by Friendship.

Mr. Lorimer took up the list of Democratic members of the legislature, and especially those who voted for him, explaining that personal reasons, principally due to long friendship or to kindly acts which he had done for them, were responsible for their desertion of their party. One of his friends was Senator Dailey, a Republican, who, he said, thus spoke to him in private conversation:

"Lorimer, I wish I was free to vote for you. The people of my city want me to vote for you, but I cannot do it because I am chairman of Senator Hopkins' (either his executive committee or his steering committee), and I cannot, on account of that, vote for you, but I wish you God speed."

Dailey Speech in Conflict.

Had Mr. Lorimer chosen, he might have read to the senate the following extract from the speech delivered by Senator Dailey on the day of the senatorial election:

"We have a duty to perform as Republicans and as Democrats, and I shall stand as I have stood on every ballot, first, last, and all the time, for party integrity, following the high precepts and the high principles of that great leader of Republicanism, Abraham Lincoln.

"And I, too, would rather lose my right arm or my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, than to join in such a despicable bipartisan movement as is being enacted in the general assembly today, and I am willing to go back to my people and face the responsibility. I would rather stand for the honor and the principles of my party than to have success gained in any such manner, and I vote therefore for the Hon. Albert J. Hopkins for United States senator."

Conflict as to Alschuler.

Mr. Lorimer asserted that George W. Alschuler voted for him because of his opposition to Hopkins, and because of his willingness to vote for any Republican or any man of any other party, to defeat Hopkins. In the testimony of Lee O'Neil Browne there is the following paragraph:

Q.—Did you ask Mr. Alschuler to vote for Mr. Lorimer?

A.—Yes, I think I did.

Mr. Lorimer asserted that Charles S. Luke voted for him because of his hatred of Hopkins. Yet Browne testified that he talked with Luke about voting for Lorimer. It is established that Luke participated in the bathroom conferences at St. Louis and his widow told the investigating committee that he had in his possession between the first and second of these conferences the sum of $950.

Error on Griffin Also.

Mr. Lorimer said that Representative John Griffin was delivered to him by "Hinky Dink" Kenna, his friendship with whom was formed by a touching episode of their boyhood days, when "Hinky Dink" gave him parts of the newspapers he was selling which had been taken from him by some hoodlums.

This is Griffin's testimony:

"Q.—Did Lee O'Neil Browne ever ask you to vote for him? A.—No, sir.

"Q.—Did any one ever ask you to vote for him? A.—No, sir."

Representative Henry Terrill swore that Griffin asked him to vote for Lorimer.

"I asked him what there would be in it, and he said, 'One thousand dollars, anyway.'"

"Lee O'Neil Browne," Mr. Lorimer said, "was a man with whom I have been associated ever since I can remember."

This is Browne's testimony about their acquaintance:

"I would suggest to you, Mr. Austrian, that I never knew Senator Lorimer, except to see him and by reputation; a mere passing acquaintance prior to possibly the expiration of the first third of the session."

Mr. Lorimer claimed he had known Senator Broderick for years and always had enjoyed his support. He did not attempt to enter into any explanation of the sworn confession of Holstlaw that Broderick gave him—Holstlaw—$2,500 for voting for Lorimer.

"Bell Wether" Is Defended.

Referring to "Manny" Abrahams, termed first by Browne "the bell wether of the legislature," Mr. Lorimer said his friendship with this legislator dated back from the time when, as a conductor on the street railways of Chicago, he permitted peddlers to ride with their packs upon his car.

"We have our bell wether here," he continued. "We have the Democratic bell wether. We have the insurgent bell wether; and when I happen to be absent from this chamber and the bell rings, anouncing the roll call, if I happen to step in the door in time, I hear the name of Senator Aldrich called. He is my bell wether; I know where my vote belongs, and I vote as he voted, and if he happens to be absent, I listen to the roll call until they come to the name of my distinguished colleague, Senator Cullom, and then, after he has voted, he becomes my bell wether. I know where to vote from that time on, and if I happen to get in a little later I wait for the roll call to reach Senator Gallinger's name and after he hash voted I know my place, and then we go along a little farther, and if I happen to come in after the roll call I wait until Senator Lodge has voted. Then if I find that he and Senator La Follette have voted the same way I wait until somebody else has voted."

Appeal to "Old Guard."

Here was an astute appeal to the "old guard" to stand by a man ready and willing to do as they might direct. There was no question of any independence of thought, no question of the protection of the interests of the country, or those of the state of Illinois, beyond the consideration they might receive from Senator Aldrich and his followers.

There are many other features of Mr. Lorimer's speech capable of an easy answer by a production of the record.

It is sufficient here to say that he did not attempt to answer the evidence presented and sought by the creation of sympathy to make votes for his retention in the senate.

SPEECH MADE BY LORIMER.

The speech of Senator Lorimer and the colloquy in regard to it follow:

"Mr. President, many questions have been suggested by the statements of senators in the debate on this case, those suggestions concerning mostly the actual conditions of my election to this body.

"Did I organize the Illinois legislature against Senator Hopkins?

"Did I make Shurtleff speaker in order to be elected senator?

"Did I make Lee O'Neil Browne my agent, my corrupt agent?

"Why did I stay in Springfield during the contest?

"For what purpose did I talk to Shephard in the speaker's room?

"Why did the Democrats vote for me?

"These are some of the questions suggested by the statements of senators in opposition to the committee report, or openly put by them in the course of the debate. To these questions many sorts of answers have been given by my opponents. Some of these answers have been fanciful theories, some mere guesses, surmises.

"There is only one kind of answer that should stand or that should count in this case—that is the plain matter-of-fact, simple truth. It is this matter of fact, this truth, that I propose to lay before the senate today.

Offers to Give History.

"I rise today simply to tell, as one who lived through it all, exactly how my election at Springfield was brought about, to answer the foregoing questions with facts that alone can answer them correctly.

"There has been an effort made to cover this whole case with a cloud of suspicion, to make it appear that some man with a powerful intellect, with great ability to organize men, by some well laid scheme prepared a plan to organize the legislature for the purpose of defeating Senator Hopkins and to elect a United States senator.

"Some senators have intimated that that man with the powerful mind and wonderful genius for organization was no other person than myself. I propose to address myself to the statements made by those senators through which they expect to build a structure that will, beyond any question of doubt, create in the minds of senators in this body that I was not only, as they say, elected by corrupt practices, but the man who was responsible for it, and he that had to do with it was no other than myself."

Denies He Organized Force.

Senator Lorimer first directed his remarks to the statement of Senator Crawford that Lorimer had organized the Illinois legislature against Deneen and Hopkins. He denied the accusation, saying Deneen sought to organize the house by the use of threats and that the bipartisan election of Shurtleff was the result of a revolt against the governor.

To show that the plan to beat Hopkins did not figure in the bipartisan speakership deal the senator said that, of the twenty-four Republicans who voted for Shurtleff seventeen afterward voted for Hopkins. Speaking of the attitude of the legislators toward the alleged dictation of Gov. Deneen, Mr. Lorimer said:

"They did what any set of sensible, courageous men would do; they organized the body regardless of the wishes of the executive branch of the government; and, Mr. President, if the governor of our state had attended to his own business, said nothing to the members of the house, permitted them, without coercion, to go on and organize that body, Mr. Shurtleff would have been the choice of 90 per cent of its members, and he would have been elected in the Republican caucus by a unanimous vote.

"Gave Shurtleff No Support."

"This man Edward Shurtleff, whom the senator from South Dakota would have you believe to be a vile and corrupt man, had twice before presided over this body; and may I say, Mr. President, he was elected both times without help from me, or even without my knowledge until I saw the reports in the papers?"

The senator said he had only a speaking acquaintance with Shurtleff prior to January, 1909, and as for the speaker being an enemy of Hopkins, he said Shurtleff was a candidate for reëlection to the house at the urgent request of Hopkins.

"As the campaign went on," said Mr. Lorimer, "much talk was heard everywhere as to whether or not candidates would pay any attention to the advisory vote, and may I say to the senator from South Dakota that it was the opinion of everybody in our state that nobody would need the advisory vote unless it happened that he had the plurality or the majority?"

Says Primary Was Ignored.

MR. CRAWFORD—Does the senator mean to distinguish the people of Illinois when he says that the candidates there all decided among themselves that they would disregard the vote of those people unless it happened to be in favor of the candidate?

MR. LORIMER—I mean to say that the candidates there did not intend to regard the primary vote. That is what I mean to say, and I mean to prove that by showing every candidate before the primary, whether he got the majority or not, was a candidate and was voted for during the session of the general assembly on almost every ballot.

Mr. Lorimer said Shurtleff deserted Hopkins because the primary vote was two to one against the Aurora man, and supported Foss in accordance with a previous understanding to vote for the primary choice of his district. That explanation, Lorimer said, disposed of the statement that Shurtleff was a Lorimer henchman. Likewise, he disclaimed any allegiance to himself on the part of Lee O'Neil Browne.

Blames Deneen for Deadlock.

Then the senator sought to prove that Gov. Deneen, and not he, was responsible for the deadlock. He said Hopkins could have been elected the first day, but that, though Lorimer's friends voted for Hopkins, the governor's followers refused to vote for the primary nominee.

"Every Republican member of the lower house with whom I am supposed to have influence," he said, "voted for Mr. Hopkins, including the senator from the district that I live in. Every Republican member from the congressional district that I represented voted for Senator Hopkins, and the record will show that Schumacher and Kittleman and Cruikshank and Ball and McNichols, all from my congressional district, voted for Senator Hopkins.

"Let me call your attention to this fact: that Gov. Deneen is, and was, the father of the direct primary, and he traveled from one end of our state to the other urging upon the people to send members to the joint assembly to make the direct primary vote the law of our state, and but for him it would not have been on our statute books today.

Primary Law at Fault.

"He used all the arguments that are used by the direct primary advocates in favor of such a law. He was for it, and he got it, and when the roll call was had in the separate branches of our joint assembly the first roll call on the senatorship, what do we find by the record.

"We find that every member of that joint assembly from Gov. Deneen's own legislative district voted for some person other than Senator Hopkins.

"Senator Lundberg, Representative Church, Representative Fulton, from Mr. Deneen's own district, some from his own ward, and two from his own neighborhood, nominated through his influence and through the power of his organization—they voted against Mr. Hopkins for United States senator, and every member of his congressional district except one, Mr. Kowalski, voted against him, and Mr. Kowalski changed his vote the next day and never voted for Mr. Hopkins again.

Says Deneen Beat Hopkins.

"If. Gov. Deneen and his friends and the men who were promoting or were supposed to be promoting the candidacy of Senator Hopkins, had voted for him he would have been elected and, as proof of this statement, the record will show that they did go with these men that I have referred to and did vote exactly as Gov. Deneen told them to vote. And that was the day of the last roll call when I was elected to this body.

"Weeks before Gov. Deneen had told many of his friends to vote for me and they came and told me so, and I told them that I would not accept their support unless they went back to him and told him that if they once pledged their support to me that under no conditions would they ever break their word, and they did so.

"And the day came when the governor called them in—the day before the roll call on which I was elected—the governor called these men into the mansion, into his office, and told them that they must not vote for Lorimer. He told them that it would be better to have no election, to allow nobody to be elected, and that the legislature should adjourn without selecting anybody for United States senator.

Refused to Desert Lorimer.

"And these men, one after another, said to him, almost every individual said to him, 'I have given my word to Lorimer, and I will not break it. If you think it is wrong to elect him you should never have permitted me to become pledged to him with your consent.' And so those men voted for me on that day.

"And those that broke their word and those that the governor controlled, who even promised to give me their support at the governor's suggestion, they voted for Hopkins, so that when the day arrived that he wanted to put them either in one column or in the other, they went there when they were so ordered to do."

Lorimer said that, inasmuch as the governor's followers refused to vote for Hopkins, it became necessary to select a candidate who could be elected. Lorimer said he urged Deneen to take it, saying that with Deneen as senator and Oglesby as governor, the party factions would be reunited. But Deneen declined because his newspaper and other advisers deterred him, Lorimer said. Then other candidates were brought forth.

Induced to Become Candidate.

"For about three weeks," continued the senator, "we were trying to elect Shurtleff, and then came on this other set of men, and it was not until it became apparent that the governor would not support any of these men that, at his urgent request, I considered the advisability of becoming a candidate.

"And this same Mr. Noyes was interviewed and my friend Mr. Shanahan talked with him about it, and Mr. Noyes said he had no objection to Mr. Deneen going to elect Lorimer to the senate, but he personally could not declare himself in favor of it.

"He said that he had fought Lorimer for so many years he could not turn over in one night and support him, but that he did believe—and he did tell Mr. Shanahan—that Mr. Lorimer was the only man, the one single Republican in Illinois, that could afford to be elected by the aid of Democratic votes; that it would not injure him politically to receive support of Democrats because he had been reared in a Democratic community and he had been elected to congress time after time by the aid of Democratic votes, and that everybody would concede that Lorimer could be elected without injury to him or to the party politically, and if Mr. Deneen wanted to join with him he had no objection.'

The senator here proceeded to reply to the inquiry of Senator Root as to how the fifty-three Democratic votes for Lorimer were procured. He said his untiring work for the deep waterway had first attracted support of him by Democrats, Congressman Rainey of Illinois being one of the first. He recounted his work for waterway legislation up to and including the $20,000,000 bond issue.

Mr. Lorimer said he was at Springfield in January, 1909, not in connection with the senatorship fight, but in the interest of waterway legislation. He said Democratic legislators voted for him chiefly because of admiration for his work in behalf of the waterway.

As an instance he cited State Senator Hearn, who unsuccessfuly sought to exact a promise that Lorimer would vote with the Democrats on the tariff, and, upon receiving a refusal, voted for Lorimer anyway.

Tells of Peoria Delegation.

"Then we come to another one, Mr. Gorman, who lives in Peoria, another Democrat," he continued, "when they began discussing the election of Lorimer, all the influential people of his town came to Springfield—Democrats and Republicans alike. Peoria is on the Illinois river, and they believe that the improvement of that river will work to the benefit of their great city, and the Democratic ex-mayor—the leader of the Democratic organization—was among the men who came, and I never met Mayor O'Connor in my life until he came to Springfield, and those men urged their members of the legislature—Democrats and Republicans—to vote and to work for Lorimer, with the result that I secured the vote of Gorman, the Democrat; the vote of Black, and the vote of Butts, who had also been requested to vote for me by Gov. Deneen.

"The Republican senator came to me before the roll was called and said: 'The people of my city want me to vote for you, but I cannot do it because I am chairman of Senator Hopkins' executive committee, or his steering committee, and I cannot, on account of that, vote for you, but I do wish you godspeed.'

Says Waterway Won Link.

"Mr. Link—you have heard much talk about Michael Link, one of the men who it has been said was bribed to vote for me. When I made the campaign in his senatorial district in Madison county, where I talked over night to all the way from a thousand to five thousand people, Michael Link was on the platform with me, and I told the people of his district; and I had there with me also the Republican members of the legislature, and I told the people of their districts that if this improvement was made they would owe as much to these men, including Link, as to anybody else in the county, and Madison county fronts on the river, and every man, woman, and child in the district is for the improvement and anxious that this work shall be done.

"The next one I come to in the waterway group is Representative Riley—a stanch old Democrat. I doubt if he ever voted for a Republican in his life, even for a supervisor of his township. But if there be a father of the waterway from the lakes to the gulf it is Representative Riley.

"If there be anything on earth that would make Riley leave his party—and I am sure that it is the only thing in the world that he would leave it for—it would be for the construction of a waterway from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, and he was not only in this work but he was the leader and the father of it all, and championed it, and made it what it is more than twenty years ago.

"Canal Also Won Shephard."

"Mr. Staymates, another Democrat, whose honesty no man on earth would impugn who ever knew him; he had devoted his time from the day we adopted the constitutonal amendment up to this time to writing to all the papers that would take his matter on this subject and he voted for me on that account.

"Then we come to Henry Shephard, and what about Henry Shephard? When the congressional party came back from New Orleans to Washington at the opening of congress, I called a meeting of the men that had made the trip and we organized, among the members of congress, an association, and when I notified Mr. Rainey he told me he could not attend that night because his friend Henry Shephard was in town, and I invited Henry Shephard to come to that little dinner that we organized, and it was there that I first met Henry Shephard.

"It was there that he first became interested in this work. It was at that time a friendship grew up between him and me that lasted until today. Henry Shephard was a member of the legislature and he was for this proposition all the way through."

Explains Alschuler Support.

Mr. Lorimer said that his presence at Springfield was no proof of bribery, even if he was there seeking votes for United States senator. Gen. Logan, when a candidate, frequented Springfield, he said.

"Now we come to another set of Democrats that voted for Lorimer—the anti-Hopkins Democrats," he continued. "There was present in that general assembly Representative George Alschuler, and he voted for Lorimer. George Alschuler lived in Hopkins' own town. He is his own neighbor, and, may I say in passing, that while he voted for Lorimer and the brand of condemnation in cast on those who did vote for Lorimer, he was reëlected to the general assembly by an overwhelming majority, and he was elected leader of the minority and is now the minority leader of that body.

"He voted for me, I may say, because he was friendly; that would be an efficient reason. He voted for me because he was opposed to the election of Hopkins, and he announced to everybody that there was not one man in Springfield that knew anything about the election but knew that George Alschuler would vote for any Republican or any man of any other party in order to defeat Senator Hopkins. It was not a Lorimer vote. He belongs to nobody, but he was against Hopkins, and he announced in the beginning that if the time ever came when his vote would beat Hopkins it would be cast for the man that would defeat him.

Tells of Luke's Support.

"Then we come to another—the departed Charles Luke. Not one single man that had aught to do with the election of senator; not one single man who was paying attention to the election of senator but knew that Luke would vote for Lorimer in order to defeat Senator Hopkins. You all observed the demeanor in the house, or in this body of that senator—Hopkins. You knew him a lot better than I do, though I helped to send him here, and you knew that Senator Hopkins has one of the most bitter and most partisan tongues of any man who ever sat in this body. If he had a weakness at all it was that weakness.

"When Hopkins went into Luke's district he used that tongue for all he was worth denouncing Luke, and he seldom made a campaign but that he would denounce Democrats everywhere he went. It may be the correct policy in a campaign, it may be the proper thing to do if you want to get votes, but it is not the policy that I have adopted. I have laid the principles of my party before the people and left it to them to decide and denounced nobody.

"Denunciation goes nowhere and it never placed a law on the statute books, and any man that has any sense would not make a campaign along those lines, but he did, and he made many bitter enemies among the Democrats, and they were willing to vote for anybody to beat him in his desire to return to this body.

"And then we come again to De Wolf. We have all heard his name on this floor. What about De Wolf? De Wolf stated upon the stand that he was ready to vote for Hopkins; that he was going to try to get other men to vote for him in order to break the deadlock; he was tired of Springfield and wanted to get back to his farm and attend to his own business.

"But everybody in Springfield knew that he would vote for any Republican or any Democrat in order to break the deadlock, so he could get back home, and when the roll was called he voted for me, for the same reason that he was willing to vote for anybody else.

"And now we come to Senator Broderick, who voted for me. Senator Broderick, you have all heard his name. Senator Broderick, I have known, I could not measure the time, probably more than fifteen years, and my old district is filled with Senator Broderick's friends and relatives, and there never was a time when I had a contest in that district. When these newspapers that are hounding me and have always been hounding me undertook to drive me out of congress without any solicitation on my part Senator Broderick sent word to his friends in the district and went there himself and pleaded with them—all Democrats—and asked them to vote for Lorimer, and they did vote for him, and let me say now, that if it had not been for the support I received from Democrats in that congressional district when these assassins of character were trying to destroy me, I would never have been in the lower house of congress, much less occupying a seat in this body.

"Never Deceived a Democrat."

"I never got one vote from a single Democrat under false pretenses. No Democrat that ever voted for me ever thought that when I went to congress I would support the principles of the great party to which he belonged. No Democrat ever was deceived into voting for me a seat in congress. Everybody knows, or, with God's help, everybody will know, where I stand on every question until my time shall come to leave this earth.

"And so it was not by deception that I got here; it was not through deception that I received that support; nor was it through deception that I received the vote of Senator Broderick when he voted for me for United States senator.

"And Senator Gorman, he is another Democrat that lived in the old district that I represented which gave a majority all the way from 5,000 to 7,000 on every election they had, except the three elections in which it sent me to congress. Democratic majorities, yes, sir, and in every election except one Senator Gorman voted for me as a Democrat. He was one of the best friends I have ever had in that congressional district, and the only time he ever voted against me was when his chum, an old schoolmate, ran in opposition to me.

Pledged Vote Forever.

"When he was elected to the senate the first time he went to Springfield and I met him in the St. Nicholas hotel, and he began the discussion of the senatorship, and he said: 'If the Democrats and the Republicans could elect you, depend upon me to do what I have always done, vote for you when the roll is called.'

"Senators E. J. Rainey and Joyce were men with whom I was brought up. I have known them ever since they wore knee breeches, and they have been my warm, close, personal friends during all these years. Representatives Cermak and Forest were men with whom I have been friendly ever since they came into manhood, lived in the same neighborhood with them, associated with them always and with their friends.

"Geshkewitch I have known for more than fifteen years, known him at home, known him in the legislature, known him in political contests in my city and my county, and he would have gone further to serve me than he would have gone to have served any Democrat in our state. That is why I got his vote.

"John Griffin voted for me. John Griffin lived in the neighborhood that I went into forty years ago, and I cannot remember just when it was that I made his acquaintance, it is so far back, and we have been friends all that time, but that was not the single reason why he voted for me.

Tells of Boyhood Defender.

"When I was a boy starting out in the world the first start I made was selling newspapers. I went over to The Tribune building one day and down into the basement and bought fifty TRIBUNES. As I came up out of the basement a crowd of boys surrounded me. Some held me by the hands and others by the throat and pulled my papers out from under my arms and then let me go, and they disappeared. I was standing there brooding not only over the dollar that I might have made out of the sale of the newspapers but the dollar and a half that I had paid for them.

"Another boy came along with an armful of papers and said to me, 'What is the matter, why are you so downcast?' and I told him the story, and he looked at me for a moment and handed his papers over to me and said, 'Stand back there in the doorway; stay there until I come back.'

"He went away and in about five minutes he returned and he had my headings in his hand and he said, 'Here are your papers: I will see to it that they don't take them away from you again.' I went off and out of that little incident grew such friendship that almost every week I helped him.

Long Friendship Is Begun.

"We had in our town at that time a Saturday afternoon paper called the Gazette. In the territory that I worked I sold all of mine and this boy usually had some left over. We used to call it in those days 'getting stuck,' and he gave them to me and I took them up into my territory and sold them for him. Sometimes this was only one, but it saved him 5 cents, and he made a profit on it, another 5 cents, and sometimes there would be a half dozen, and he saved his 30 cents, and that friendship grew up on that basis.

"A dollar and a half he had saved for me and a dollar and a half with the other dollar of the profits was more to me, Senator Root, in those days, than a million dollars would be to many people in this country today.

"What grew out of that little incident was a friendship and a gratitude that has lasted for over forty years. This man that I spoke of is a man now; he was a boy then. He was a sort of hero with the newsboys, a sort of a king of the crowd, and from what they said he did I have no doubt he was, and the senators in this chamber have heard his name, for the newspapers of my town are ringing with it every day. In those days we called him 'Hinky Dink.' His name was Michael Kenna, but the nickname has followed him to this day.

Griffin Vote Due to Kenna.

"He is the leading Democrat in the neighborhood in which he lived, and John Griffin represents that district, and when the papers published the story that Lorimer would probably be a candidate for senator he came to my office and said: 'Bill, I understand you are going to be a candidate for United States senator, and you can't be elected unless you get Democratic votes, and you can depend upon me that Griffin will vote for you, if no other member of the legislature does.'

"Can the senator from New York understand a situation of that kind? Has he ever come up through conditions of that sort that bind men together more firmly than all the things that can be done for him when he has grown to manhood and after he has been successful?

"When we quit selling papers Michael Kenna went one way and I went another. He became a Democrat and I became a Republican, but there never has been a time in forty years when I, without solicitation, or he, without solicitation, could help each other that we have failed to do it—almost invariably without notifying the other of our performance of what we considered our duty. The senator from New York and the senator from South Dakota and the other senators cannot understand that kind of a life, and if they cannot then I do not blame them.

Crawford Objects to Plea.

MR. CRAWFORD—Mr. President, I do not think there is a person on the face of the earth to whom stories of that kind do not appeal, but I want to say to the senator from Illinois that he is not the only poor boy who has made his way from hardship to this senate, and he cannot plead that he is the only one.

MR. LORIMER—I am not pleading that I am the only one who has made his way through this world and now sits in this senate, nor am I pleading poverty or hard knocks as a reason why I should sit in this body. I am giving to the senators the truth of why these men voted for me for United States senator. I am not asking for sympathy; I do not want sympathy. This is not a question of sympathy; it is a question of right or wrong. If the senate can believe me to be the low, vile creature that the senator from South Dakota, the senator from New York, and other senators would have you believe me to be, then there is a plain duty staring you squarely in the face, regardless of the testimony in this record. If I could be the foul wretch that you senators have sought to paint me, regardless of how I came here, by right or by wrong, I should be driven from yonder door with the stamp of infamy on my back. I am not pleading for sympathy. I am trying to relate the truth of my election as it was and not as senators would have you believe.

Job Brings Hilton Support.

"I come to another, George C. Hilton, a Democrat, a member of the legislature—and has been for many years—who lived in my old congressional district and always helped me," continued Mr. Lorimer. "In my state there is a great deal of patronage that is known as minority patronage, given to the Democrats, and in my career of over twenty years and on account of the position I hold in my party, I have had much to say about the disposition of that patronage.

"So it happened to fall to me to say that George Hilton, several years ago, should be appointed to the chief bailiff's office in my city, a place that paid him well and a place for the holding of which he is much gratified.

"Representative Hruby is also a boy from my old neighborhood, and I have helped him and his friends for the last twenty-five years. Walter A. Lantz, a member of the general assembly, a man who through my efforts and assistance was appointed a member of the civil service board of the county in which I lived, comes next. Then there are John McLaughlin and George McConnell, both members of the same congressional district that I live in. I have known them both since boyhood, and I do not know how many favors they have done for me or I have done for them. But I would say that they are probably almost innumerable.

Browne Also Old Friend.

"Lee O'Neil Browne and John Poulton are men with whom I have associated ever since I can remember. John Walsh, a resident of my old congressional district, never failed to vote for me for congress, and he is now and has been for years in the circuit clerk's office of our county at the suggestion of my friends and myself. Werdell and Frank Wilson I have known for years out of number.

"'Pete' Galligan—I do not know how long I have known 'Pete,' but he has been a Democrat all these years, a leader in the Democratic party, for many years a leader in the state legislature, and at one time he served in the senate of our state. So partisan is 'Pete,' or so partisan was 'Pete,' that, though I was his best friend, he would not ask a favor of me; yet he would go any length, at the same time, to serve me.

"About sixteen years ago, when everybody was hard up, 'Pete' was having the most trying time of his life. His wife was sick, sick unto death, and he did not have a dollar. No money to pay the doctor, no money to buy the medicine, no money to buy coal to keep the home warm. He came to me and related his circumstances and I secured an appointment for him for which he received a fair salary, with which he was able to take care of his sick wife, to give to her such nourishment as she required during those long, painful days, and he finally gave her a decent burial.

"He called on all his friends, he called on the Democratic leaders for help, but he called in vain. I was fortunate enough to be able to help him, and from that day to this the gratitude of 'Pete' has made him almost my slave.

"Galligan Defied All Threats."

"There is nothing within the bounds of decency, nothing that is honorable that he would refuse to do for me if I asked him. And the day that I was elected, in the house of representatives at Springfield, and the day I was brought out to address that body, just before I went upon the speakers' stand, I was met by 'Pete' Galligan and, with the tears streaming down his face, tears of joy, tears of great pleasure, tears of gratitude for an opportunity that had been afforded him for paying back what he thought was a great obligation.

"It was that sort of thing, Mr. President, that made Peter Galligan my friend; it was that act that made him my devoted friend, and I know that there is no man in Illinois, and I care not to what party he belongs, that 'Pete' Galligan would go so far for, would make so many sacrifices for, as he would for me.

"When he cast his vote he did not think he was making a sacrifice, because in the house of representatives, when the roll was called and they reached his name, the Republicans and Democrats had stated upon that floor, the Democrats who voted for me would live to rue the day, that they would be ostracized and driven out of their party—when his name was called he said: 'Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with the statements made here; I will not be ostracized from my party; I will not rue the day that I vote for Lorimer. When the people from my district know that I am returning after this vote is cast they will meet me at the depot with a brass band and say, "Here comes our hero,"' and Pete Galligan is now a member of the general assembly, reëlected after his vote was cast for me, and reëlected by an overwhelming majority.

How Abrahams Was Won.

"Much has been made of the name of Emmanuel Abrahams—'Manny' Abrahams, they say. That was what we called him when he was a boy—Manny Abrahams—the bell wether, and the bell wether goes ringing all through the speech of the senator from New York. Now, about 'Manny' Abrahams. It is a short story, and I will tell you a little of 'Manny' Abrahams.

"When I was about 20 years old I was running a street car on South Halsted street in Chicago, and in those days, early in the morning, we had few passengers, and about that time the Jews were moving over into the neighborhood of Halsted and Twelfth street, and they came to Halsted and Twelfth street to take a car ride to go out to the suburbs with their big packs of goods and work their way home, disposing of their wares during the day.

"In those days we had a rule that permitted the conductor to either take or reject passengers with large packages, and in those days they were prejudiced against that class of people in that neighborhood—strong and bitter. Many of our conductors, when we arrived at Twelfth street, would refuse, even with an empty car, to allow them to ride, and frequently I have seen those men go on the car with a pack and lay it on the platform and see the conductor stop the car and kick

... out in the street, and the car would go on, and the passenger staid there or else he walked out in the suburbs.

Rides Cause of Gratitude.

"My folks taught me to have prejudice against no one; I am not made that way, and I have no prejudice against anybody of any nationality, and when I came along in the morning I always took those men on board with their packs, and I carried them out to the end of the line, until I became known as the man that they could ride with, and they waited there, and it turned out after a while that every morning I would get a large load of those men.

"Those men increased in moving into this neighborhood, and I was known as their friend. Still it was a small thing to do. There was no reason why men should have any gratitude on account of permitting them to ride and paying their fare, but they did have it.

"After I quit the service on the car I lived in the same ward with those people, and as they came in I became better acquainted with them, and I entered into politics, and when I entered into politics none of them was ever permitted to vote at the polls.

Becomes Protector of Jews.

"Nobody would allow them to go near the polls, and when they undertook to go there they would knock them down and throw bricks at them and drive them away. I organized every precinct in which they lived, and we gave them protection, and it got so that every one that had a small trouble came to my home at night, and the time was when there might be a dozen, and maybe fifty, coming to my home with their little troubles and asking for my help, and I helped them always.

"Then I moved out of the neighborhood, but when I go down there now to attend a meeting—I go there about once every year or two—they have large halls and large meetings, and I am met there by the old citizens and the rabbis of that neighborhood, and I am taken around and introduced to the newcomers, and I am not introduced as Mr. Lorimer. I am not presented as Congressman Lorimer. I have not been acquainted with them as senator. I am taken from one to the other and introduced as the father.

"Does the senator from New York know what that means? When people come to believe in you, and to trust you, and almost to revere you as these people do; when they come to the point of introducing you as the father. That is the greatest compliment that race of people can pay to any man, and, whether I deserve that compliment or not, whether I have earned their gratitude or not, that is the condition there, and any man that would declare for the political, for the business, for the financial, or for the social destruction of Lorimer and run for any office in that district would get as many votes as he could put in his pocket.

Abrahams Obeyed Followers.

"No man can go into that district, as my enemy, among those people and live politically, and I state that, not in a sense of boasting but because it is a matter of fact. And "Manny" Abrahams could not have gone back home and looked his people in the face if I had been a candidate and beaten by one vote, and he had failed to vote for me.

"Oh 'Manny' Abrahams, the bell wether, and I have said that it goes ringing all through the speech of the senator from New York. Oh for what purpose? For any other purpose than creating prejudice? I wish I could think so. A bell wether—the first man on the roll call, as everybody knows, as if a bell wether was a new thing in legislative bodies; as if we have never heard of a bell wether here, or as if they had never had a bell wether in the house of representatives; or as if they had never had a bell wether in any legislative body of the United States.

"We have our bell wether here. We have the democratic bell wether. We have the insurgent bell wether, and we have the stalwart bell wether.

Calls Aldrich Own Bell Wether.

"When I happen to be absent from this chamber and the bell rings announcing the roll call; if I happen to step in the door in time I hear the name of Senator Aldrich called—he is my bell wether—I know where my vote belongs, and I vote as he voted. If he happens to be absent, I listen to the roll call until they come down to the name of my distinguished colleague, Senator Cullom, and then, after he has voted, he becomes my bell wether.

"I know where to vote from that time on, and if I happen to get in a little later, I wait for the roll call to reach Senator Gallinger's name, and after he has voted, I know my place, and then we go along a little further, and if I happen to come in after the roll call, I wait until Senator Lodge has voted. Then if I find that he and Senator La Follette have both voted the same way, I wait until somebody else has voted.

"Now, senators know that when the roll is called that they walk into the door and ask, 'How is our vote?' I have heard many a Democrat say that, as I have a seat on their side with them and sometimes they talk too loud, and they ask that question, so I cannot miss hearing it, and so I know that they have a bellwether.

Even Root Has Bell Wether.

"And while I do not know it as a matter of fact, I venture this statement: The time has been—and I will go a little further than that and say that the time will come—when the senator from New York (Mr. Root) will walk into this chamber, or has walked into this chamber, when they were calling the roll and has asked some one in whom he has confidence, 'How is our vote?' and he has voted that way.

"Why, Mr. President, their talk about bellwethers is all nonsense. There is a bellwether in every legislative assembly in this country, and, as long as there are parties, and as long as there are principles that unite parties, there will be bellwethers. And the talk of bellwethers fools nobody; they will create no suspicion; they will not deceive anybody either in this forum or in the house of representatives or in any other legislative body in this country, or anywhere else, unless it is upon the chautauqua.

"Mr. President, grave charges have been made against me as to my right to hold a seat in this body, but if I read the speeches of the senators rightly, if I understand what they mean, and some of them go even to the extent of making almost the direct charge, if I understand them at all, they would leave an impression upon this body that I was elected by bribery and corruption, and not only that I was elected by bribery and corruption but that I aided it and that I gave it the stamp of my approval, that I sanctioned it, and in proving their statement they point out that Lee O'Neil Browne was my agent, my authorized agent.

"Browne Did Not Deliver."

"What else can it mean? They would have you believe that Lee O'Neil Browne tied up in one package thirty Democratic votes, carried them into the hall of the general assembly, and dumped them down, bought body and soul and delivered to me.

"I can understand how that might make an impression on senators who know nothing about the situation, that know nothing about the politics of my state. But, Mr. President, here is a list of thirty-four Democrats that were for me for United States senator on my own account, not because Lee O'Neil Browne delivered them to me—seventeen or eighteen—nineteen I think it was—of the men who belonged to the Lee O'Neil Browne faction, that voted for me, would have voted for me if I was a candidate for senator even if Lee O'Neil Browne labored with them through the whole session to oppose me.

"He did not deliver them, they delivered him. They were my friends and there is not one of them that would not have gone farther in a personal matter for me than they would have gone for Lee O'Neil Browne, and all of them would have made more sacrifices for me personally than they would make for any Democrat in the state of Illinois, and I measure my words when I make that statement. Thirty-four of the fifty-three Democrats, for one personal reason or another, voted for me and pleaded with the other nineteen Democrats and got them to vote for me, too."

Explains Presence at Capital.

Mr. Lorimer here entered into a long explanation of his presence in the speaker's room on the day he was elected. He said it was a general gathering place, and then continued:

"Has any member of this senate ever sat in the speaker's room at the capital of his state? Has any man that ever was elected to this body sat in the speaker's room while the roll was being called that elected him to this body? If he was there, is it a sign of bribery and corruption? O, Mr. President, if that is to be adopted, if that is to be adopted as a rule, I do not know how men are going to get votes when they want to be elected to this great forum.

"Surely I never will intimate to anybody anywhere that because a man who was elected to this body was present in his capital and sitting in the speaker's room when the roll was called and talked to the members of the legislature in that room, surely I never will intimate that is an evidence of bribery and corrupt practices, and I do not think, Mr. President, that anybody else will think so. I do not believe anybody will pay any attention or give any weight at all to a statement of that kind. That was made to cast a cloud of suspicion. It is not an evidence of anything, and cannot be of anything, either good or bad, and it could have had no other purpose except to unsettle the minds of senators and probably lead them to believe that maybe something was wrong.

"O, Mr. President, if the securing of Democratic votes either for myself or for my party or for the candidates of my party is an evidence of corruption, then I have been a corruptionist ever since I was a boy."

Describes Rise in Politics.

The senator recounted his rise as a political organizer in Democratic territory.

"I began to organize," he said, "not to become a leader in my party but to take care of my own precinct two days in a year and see that the ballots were there for Republicans when they came to vote. That precinct was organized and then the other precincts were organized because once the political virus is injected into the white man there is no telling where it stops.

"So I went into the next precinct and organized, and how? With Republicans? No; there were no Republicans there. I organized it with Democrats, young men of my age, who had never been tied up to their party, but they were Democrats because their good fathers were Democrats. They joined with us and we organized one precinct after another until the whole ward was organized. We did not go out and call the Democrats names; we did not abuse Democrats. We told them the things that our party stood for and we asked them to join us on that account. After a while, with energy and industry, we had a splendid organization in every precinct in the ward, and we were not in politics, or at least we did not know we were, but we had not been in politics over two years until we sent a Republican alderman to the council from that ward, and that organization spread from that ward to other wards until the Republican leaders of our county began to look to that part of the county for their Republican majorities. Except for that organization the city of Chicago would have been strongly Democratic for the last twenty years as is the city of New York.

Organization Based on Good.

"This organization, my friends, was bred not in lies, not in denunciation, but in principle and fostered by what we thought was the truth and good for each other. It was not long until the leaders of the party looked to our territory, and without knowing it or without knowing why, I was pushed forward and made the leader of that Democratic section of the county for my party.

"I do not know whether or not senators understand what that means, who do not live in a large city, and a large county. In our city and in our county in those days we had at the disposal of the party that was in power anywhere from 12,000 to 15,000 places, according to the season of the year, and when the Republican party came into the control the first time in my career in 1897, the disposition of all the patronage in that section fell into my hands.

"I knew nothing about it. To be truthful I did not know what to do with it. I disposed of it the best way I could, and it was disposed of among the people in our neighborhood, and that is evidence those who came from Democratic families into our party were chiefly the beneficiaries of what we had. And from that time to this no man ever came to my house, no man ever came to my office to ask me to do him a favor, little or big, unless it was strictly party matter, I never asked him what his politics was.

Says Democrats Favor Him.

"I do not know and I cannot know whether I properly carried out my obligations in the disposition of those places or not; I do not know what people would think about it. But I do know that in the territory from which I come, 90 per cent of the Democrats, whether they vote for me or not, will tell you that they would rather have Lorimer in congress, or Lorimer in any place that he wants to go, than to advance any man in their own party.

"And as I stated before, not because I ever deceived a Democrat, no Democrat ever thought that I would vote with his party when he voted for me. A distinguished senator, an Illinois Democrat in the Illinois general assembly, came to me—and unless senators ask his name I shall withhold it—a few days before I was elected and said:

"'Lorimer, you know I would like to vote for you, but I live down here in a Democratic country, where it is hard to forgive a Democrat if he helps a Republican, and I think you ought to be sent to the senate, and if you will vote with the Democrats on the tariff, I will vote for you,' and I said to him, 'Senator, I cannot do that,' and he thought for a moment or two. 'Well,' he said, 'I will go a little further with you, and if you will vote with Senator La Follette and his followers on the tariff bill in the senate, I will vote for you. It is not going the whole distance, but I can go back to my district and my people and that will not destroy me politically because I voted for you, if you will vote that way.'

"And I told him I could not do that, and then he said: 'Well, I am sorry, I would like to vote for you; I would like to see you in the senate, but I cannot afford to do it, unless you can get something to make the way easy for me.' And so it is that at no time or at no place have I ever had Democratic support on account of any reason except pure unadulterated friendship.

"In the last campaign, when I was elected to congress, when I was unable to even sign a letter to my constituents, that district gave a majority of 10,000 to President Taft. He received the largest vote and the largest majority—he received the largest vote of any person running in that district. I did not make one speech, and I did not see one man, and I got more than 3,500 majority more than President Taft.

"And what is that an evidence of? Is that any evidence of bribery; is it an evidence of corrupting Democrats to vote for me? If it is, then, Mr. President, I have a trail of corrupting Democrats following me over my career of twenty-five years, and if they were bought for money I would have been compelled to buy them by the tens of thousands, and according to the theory that is established here it would cost a million of dollars.

Not Accused of Bribery.

"O, Mr. President, it is an easy matter to intimate that any man is guilty of wrongdoing, and when once the intimation is made, I regret to say, it is an easy matter for many people to believe it; but when one is charged with wrongdoing, the facts should be laid before the judging body.

"They should be unqualified and unadulterated truth, and that applies more largely to the question of unseating a senator or a member of the house of representatives, in my opinion, than it does to taking the life or the liberty or the property of a citizen. To turn a member from this or any other legislative body under suspicion that if certain things happened, certain other things might have happened, would be establishing a rule that would destroy this republic.

"No man has ever, not even THE TRIBUNE, dared to charge I was even remotely guilty of bribery or corrupt practice, and I never did, not only in this election, but in any other election, use one dollar or knowingly permit the use of one dollar or had the remotest idea or knowledge of the use of one dollar for my election or the corrupt use of one dollar for bribery or for any other corrupt practice, either to the lower house or to this house.

Word Never Was Broken.

"If senators even suggest that they think that I did have knowledge of any corrupt practices of any kind, I am sorry for it, because, on my word as a man, even THE TRIBUNE will not say to you or intimate to you that they know of any time that I ever even remotely broke that word or violated a faith—even they will not say to you that I am guilty of that account.

"I never did either give or know of any other giving any kind of promise or any money or anything else as an inducement for any one to vote for me, and my regret, Mr. President, is that anybody should think so.

"I claim nothing more for myself than any other man. I am not possessed of any more virtue than any other decent citizen of this country, but in this life that I have lived and worked for forty years, I may not have succeeded, but I have tried as near as the human flesh will permit any human being to try—I have tried to live a life that would make me at least acceptable to the decent citizens of my community. I have tried for forty years to live a life that would make my neighbors, and my townsmen, and the people of my state have confidence in me.

Upholds His Personal Life.

"I say I may not have succeeded, but God knows I have tried. But if I have failed, if I did not succeed, no living man will come to my door and make the charge of practicing bribery or corruption in any election that I was ever interested in, be it for myself or for anybody else, and I regret that there are senators in this chamber who feel that they have been able to find anything at all in my business life, in my political career, in my social life, or in my life with my family that will justify him in even having a suspicion that I am guilty of the charges that they would lay at my door.

"I say again, on my word as a man and on my word as a senator, that I am not guilty and that I have no knoweldge, and that I had no knowledge in the remotest degree, that bribery and corruption was practiced in securing the seat for me in this body, and I do not believe—no matter what THE TRIBUNE says, no matter what they have been able to do through coercion in the state's attorney's office in my county—I do not believe that votes were bought by anybody to send me to this body.

"I have stated that I knew something about my election to this body, and I have stated to you what I knew about it, and what I have stated to you is the truth, and even THE TRIBUNE will not dare to refute the statement that these thirty-four Democrats voted for me for the reason that I have stated to you, and that they secured the balance of the Democratic vote, and instead of Lee O'Neil Browne, who was friendly to me, and who did help me, and to whom I am obligated—instead of him delivering these fifty-three votes from the Democratic party to me when I was elected United States senator, with their influence, with their talk, with their persuasion, they delivered to me Lee O'Neil Browne, if there was any delivery of anybody at any time during my election."

LORIMER MEN PLAN FETE.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—Lorimer partisans in the Illinois legislature are said to be planning a spectacular demonstration in the house tomorrow if the vote to be taken at Washington is favorable to Senator Lorimer.

Friends of Lorimer said tonight they expected the news of the vote would reach here when the two houses are in session. If the news comes after adjournment for the day the Lorimer adherents plan to take possession of the capitol for a celebration.

"I feel sorry for the big glass chandeliers in the hall of representatives," said a Lorimer partisan tonight, "if the vote is favorable tomorrow. If the news comes while the house is in session you can look for the wildest scenes that have been witnessed in the old hall in a long time. We will make the scenes that usually accompany the last night of the session look tame."

ALLEGED FORGER IS CAUGHT.

George M. Chaney, Wanted to Answer Charges of Fraudulently Obtaining $75,000, Arrested in New Orleans.

Pontiac, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—George M. Chaney, a loan and insurance man, wanted here to answer charges of forgeries estimated at $75,000, was arrested at New Orleans today.

Deneen Calls Lorimer Speech False; Says Accusations Constitute Trick.

Governor asserts charges against self were made to cloud issue and prevent exposure of corruption by bi-partisan ring in state legislature. Did not agree to be candidate, and urged defeat of junior senator.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—"But what does all this have to do with the charge that Senator Lorimer was elected by the corrupt use of money."

With these words Gov. Deneen closes a statement made tonight in reply to that portion of Senator Lorimer's speech in the United States senate wherein the junior senator attempted further to complicate the issue in his case. Gov. Deneen's statement follows:

"I have only such meager information regarding the speech made by Senator Lorimer today as appeared in the afternoon editions of the Springfeild papers. I notice, however, that he followed the course which I have often observed is followed by men charged with serious offenses in Cook county when I was state's attorney there, of trying to escape explanation of the facts against him by making charges against men who are not on trial. He has followed the course of Mr. Erbstein, one of the attorneys for Mr. Lee O'Neil Browne, who was recently indicted and tried in the criminal courts of Cook county for jury bribing and who refrained from going on the witness stand to testify under oath, where he could be cross-examined, and, instead, made a speech to the jury where his statements were not subject to the rules of cross-examination.

"Mr. Lorimer in his speech charges:

"1.—That I consented to become a candidate for senator and then immediately withdrew. This is not true. I never gave my consent to him or anybody else to become a candidate, but, on the contrary, refused to do so and stated to every one who spoke to me upon the subject that I refused to become a candidate and would not accept the office if elected.

"2.—He charges that Edward Shurtleff became speaker of the house because I threatened to deprive representatives of patronage should they vote for him, and that I tried to elect one of my friends as speaker. Neither of these charges is true. I threatened no one with taking patronage from him, nor did I ask any member to vote for any particular person for speaker. I urged the Republicans to go into a Republican caucus and abide by the will of the majority as expressed there; and had Mr. Shurtleff been selected as Republican candidate for speaker in a Republican caucus, any man who would have followed my advice would have supported him.

"The same situation arose here last month at the beginning of the present session of the general assembly. Mr. Shurtleff and his friends again refused to go into the regular Republican caucus. The other sixty-four Republicans, most of whom were my friends, went into the caucus and there selected Mr. Charles Adkins as the Republican candidate. I urged the Republicans to go into this caucus and abide by its decision, but did not indicate to any Republican any preference for speaker.

"Immediately after Mr. Adkins had been chosen for speaker it appeared that Mr. Shurtleff and his friends, who were hostile to me and were opposed to the Republican platform, would be given conspicuous places and would, in fact, dominate the house organization. Notwithstanding this was apparent, every one of the sixty-four members who went into the caucus voted for Mr. Adkins for speaker because he was the caucus nominee.

"3. Senator Lorimer states that I could have elected Mr. Hopkins senator at any time. In view of the fact that he charges in the same breath that I could not elect a speaker, this statement falls by its own weight and needs no further refutation.

"4. He states that Mr. Shurtleff was one of Mr. Hopkins' managers. This will be news in Illinois.

"5. He has added to the list of candidates, whom he claimed in his speech of May 28, 1910, that he submitted to me, Mr. George Edmund Foss. My answer, made on May 29th, the day after Mr. Lorimer's speech in the senate stands now as to Mr. Foss also.

"6. He states 'I urged him [Deneen] to become a candidate, telling him I believed he would re-unite our party torn asunder by factional strife.' The proposal to elect me U. S. senator was not by Republican votes alone, but I was assured by him that I would get practically the entire Democratic vote in the house.

"No one who is familiar with the situation but knows that the majority of the Republicans were at all times for Senator Hopkins and would not have voted for me had I become a candidate or for any one else; and the only hope of electing any body but Senator Hopkins lay in securing a large Democratic support. No Democrat offered me such support and the assurances of that vote came entirely from Senator Lorimer, who appeared even at that time to have authority to speak for the Democrats in this matter.

"I notice that he gives reasons why the Democracy would support him. I have looked in vain in his speech for reasons why they would support me or any other Republican whom he named in his speech today, none of whom could have gotten a majority of the Republicans because the majority felt bound by the primary vote to vote for Senator Hopkins.

"The truth is the bipartisan coalition which reached its climax in the election of Senator Lorimer was formed in the general assembly which preceded his election for the purpose of defeating me. To injure me it made a spurious investigation of our state institutions; it made corrupt alliances with certain interests that could not use me to secure my defeat in the primaries and got a very influential wing of the Democratic party to unite with it in this effort. It was the understanding then that if the effort to defeat me at the primaries failed the Republican members of the bipartisan coalition would in turn join with the Democrats to defeat me at the polls, a program which was followed to the letter.

"After the election it became apparent that the Republican wing of this bipartisan coalition would not go into a Republican caucus upon the speakership, where they would be in a hopeless minority, and before the general assembly met it became apparent, also, that they would join with the Democrats to elect a speaker and organize the house of representatives on bipartisan lines. This was done, and Mr. Shurtleff was elected speaker.

"It was understood that the first fruits of this coalition would be to unseat me as governor, and the public is familiar with the long drawn out contest, where the plan was to unseat me without counting votes upon trumped up general charges affecting every county in the state. Finally the contest committee ruled that they would have to file specifications, when the whole rotten fabric of false accusation dissolved and disappeared.

"It was after this that I was offered the nomination for the senatorship by men who had waged this unrelenting warfare against me for so long a time. Manifestly, the only purpose of such a proposal from such a source was to get me out of the governorship, where I stood in the way of their plans, and leave to this bipartisan combination the reuniting of the Republican party, torn asunder by factional strife. What interest the fifty-three Democrats who voted for Senator Lorimer had in the reconciliation of Republican factions, torn asunder by factional strife, doth not yet appear.

"But what does all this have to do with the charges or the evidence that Mr. Lorimer was elected by corrupt use of money?"

Gov. Deneen added that he wanted to reiterate his previous statement, made on May 28, 1910, as follows:

"Regarding the deadlock over the senatorship:

"After the primaries I stood for the election of Senator Hopkins, and did not know that Senator Lorimer and Mr. Shurtleff and their friends were against him until a minority of the Republican members, who were in harmony with Senator Lorimer and Speaker Shurtleff, had effected an organization of the house of representatives with the aid of the Democratic members.

"After the deadlock had existed some time Senator Lorimer called upon me repeatedly. I had assumed from the conversations we had at these times that it was entirely with a view of effecting a reconciliation between Republican factions; and, notwithstanding that I felt I had suffered unjustly by reason of attacks made upon me by him and his friends, both in the preceding legislature, the preceding primaries, the preceding election, and the preceding organization of the house, and in the effort to unseat me and seat my opponent as governor, I felt that I should lay aside all personal feeling and interest in the hope of bringing about harmony in the party.

"Senator Lorimer informed me that his friends would, under no circumstances, vote for Senator Hopkins, and, as it was impossible to elect a senator by Republican votes without the votes of his friends, I stated that they should go into a Republican caucus to select a candidate who would secure the majority vote in the caucus, and thereafter the full vote of the party in his election to the senatorship.

"This was the view taken by Republicans throughout the state, and a number of names had been mentioned in this connection by friends of various candidates, Col. Lowden, Congressman McKinley, Mr. A. C. Bartlett, W. A. Rodenburg, and a number of others, among them Mr. West.

"Senator Lorimer was opposed to the plan of nominating by caucus. Later I was informed by him and his friends that I could be elected senator. I refused absolutely to consider it. Nevertheless, shortly before his election an effort was made by him and his friends in the general assembly to elect me. I called together in my office Republicans who had supported me in the senate and who had gone into a Republican caucus in the house, and stated to them that this movement was without my knowledge and that I would not accept the office if elected.

"Shortly before Senator Lorimer was elected and after the deadlock had dragged on for months, it became apparent that he was a candidate. A number of my friends, whom he mentions in his speech, called upon me and I advised them strongly against voting for him, even though he could get a minority of the Republicans to aid the Democrats in electing him.

"All of these facts were published as the contest wore on and were at that time familiar to everybody.

"While I am surprised at the character of the statements made by Senator Lorimer, I am at a loss to know what possible relation they bear to the charge now under investigation that his election to the United States senate was procured by means of bribery."

Father-in-Law of Divorcee Pays Heavily to Avoid Possible Suits—Woman May Join Vanderbilt Abroad.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—It cost Isaac E. Emerson, the Baltimore millionaire, $200,000 to secure a promise from his former son-in-law, Dr. Smith Hollis McKim, that neither he nor Alfred G. Vanderbilt will be made defendant in suits for the alienation of his divorced wife's affections. Capt. Emerson is the father of Mrs. Margaret Emerson McKim. Vanderbilt has been mentioned from time to time as a possible suitor for her hand.

May Join Vanderbilt Abroad.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—It was learned today that Alfred G. Vanderbilt is planning to sail for Europe next month for an extended stay and it is said that he may be joined abroad by the former Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim, daughter of Dr. Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore.

While no engagement has been announced, friends of both Mr. Vanderbilt and Mrs. McKim believe they will be married abroad.

This information came from a lawyer who participated in negotiations which resulted in an agreement by which Dr. McKim accepted a lump sum and an annuity to withdraw all suits growing out of his wife's divorce.

CARNEGIE ACCUSED OF GREED BY REPRESENTATIVE RAINEY.

Illinois Congressman Disputes Ironmaster's Statement Concerning "Voice of God" Directing Actions.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Greed, not the "voice of God," prompted Andrew Carnegie to manufacture armor plate for the government, Representative Rainey said in a speech which will appear tomorrow in the Congressional Record.

In a speech made by Mr. Carnegie before the Republican club of New York Jan. 7 he is said to have asserted that he went into the business of making armor plate in 1890 because the president asked him to, and he regarded a request from such authority as the "voice of God."

Mr. Rainey cites the investigation of a house committee to show that while the Bethlehem Steel company was charging the United States from $517 to $725 a ton for armor plate, it entered into a contract with Russia to supply the same plate at $249 a ton.

CANADA IS LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Parliament Replies to Annexation Talk by Vote.

EXTRA SESSION IS EXPECTED.

Insurgents in Senate May Filibuster Postoffice Appropriation.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 22.—The Canadian parliament today formally declared political loyalty to Great Britain. The declaration was made as an answer to allegations that reciprocity with the United States will result in annexation.

Neither the government nor the opposition intended to make this declaration when the house opened at 3 p. m. They were surprised when the proposal was sprung from the French Nationalist group, which has been charged freely with disloyalty for its stand on the naval issue.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition, had planned that the reciprocity debate follow its regular course, and the prime minister had moved the house into committee for that purpose, when F. D. Monk, the chief French Nationalist, declared that in Canada, the United States, and Great Britain some public men and a part of the press had stated that annexation was bound to follow reciprocity. He believed there was no genuine annexation sentiment in Canada, and that a statement to that effect should be formally made.

Keep Bonds to Britain Intact.

He therefore moved an amendment declaring that with a view to dispelling the feeling of unrest created in Canada by comments made in the United States and Canada as to the political consequences of the agreement the house wishes to affirm emphatically its determination to preserve intact the bonds which unite Canada to the British empire and the full liberty of Canada to control her fiscal policy and internal autonomy.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier accepted the Monk amendment, though in doing so he adopted the most unusual course of accepting an amendment to a government motion from an opponent of the administration. The amendment was adopted without a dissenting voice, but before the vote was reached there was an expression of opinion from leading members of the house.

Laurier Scoffs at Annexation.

"This discussion in which we are engaged has given rise to a great deal of comment on both sides of the line," said Laurier. "Men there are in the United States who have interpreted this agreement as meaning ultimately the annexation of Canada. Men there are on this side of the line who have taken the same position, but I am glad to say there is not one man on this side of the house who has ever thought of any such thing.

"But if it is necessary in order to strengthen the wavering faith of the honorable gentleman opposite I have no objection to accepting the motion and to say that this discussion will in no way affect or jeopardize the allegiance of this country to the motherland. This motion affirms a principle of which everybody is persuaded, and which no one need to affirm."

Others Express Fears.

"I can tell the prime minister this," said Mr. Borden, "that if this reciprocity proposition means anything it means commercial union between Canada and the United States in the end."

Mr. Borden declared he was of the opinion that the American congress had not accepted the proposal on economic grounds but because it would lead to political absorption."

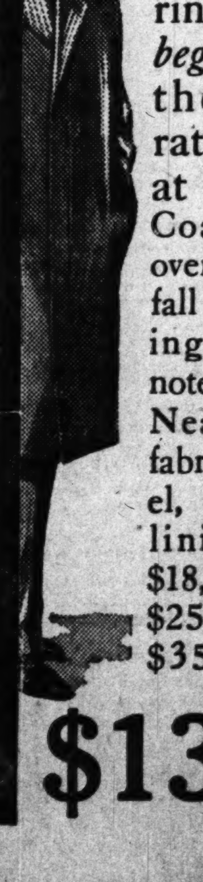

W. F. MacLean declared there was the germ of annexation in the agreement which had been "concocted" by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "the new czar of Canada," and President Taft, "the czar of the United States."

EXTRA SESSION EXPECTED.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The chaotic conditions existing tonight in the United States senate add materially to the probability of an extra session of congress.

In fact, indications began to multiply today that the senate leaders, having become convinced that an extra session is unavoidable, have decided to throw into that session a great deal more than the Canadian reciprocity agreement, which really will be the cause for the convening of the new congress.

This, it is charged by the advocates of reciprocity, will be done for the purpose of beclouding the issue as much as possible and to delay the ratification of the agreement by much the same tactics that have characterized the present session. Under the guise of the fighting over other matters, it is charged, consideration of the reciprocity agreement will be continually postponed. President Taft is said to be doing all he can to bring the Republican leaders into line, but he is met with opposition in both wings of the party—the regulars and the insurgents.

NEW JAP TREATY HAS OPPOSITION

Senator Hale Says It Means Surrender of Our Commercial Advantage.

LODGE MAKES DEFENSE.

California Senate Adopts Resolution Urging Rejection of the Measure.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The new treaty with Japan favored by President Taft and designed to replace the existing treaty and eliminate restrictions upon immigration met with unexpected resistance today in the senate. The developments of the day were:

Treaty which was favorably reported by senate committee opposed by Senator Hale and defeated by Senator Lodge.

California senate adopted resolution urging congress to refuse to assent to the treaty.

Senator Hale in his speech declared that the treaty represented a voluntary surrender by the administration of a commercial advantage which this country by rights would enjoy for another year over the nations of Europe with whom Japan is negotiating new commercial relations.

Senator Lodge, who reported the treaty from the committee on foreign relations which agreed to report it after its provisions had been explained by Secretary of State Knox, was unable to satisfy the objectors.

Lodge Shows Much Feeling.

Considerable feeling was exhibited by Mr. Lodge in answering the Maine senator's criticisms. It had been expected that there might be some opposition from Pacific coast senators because of the elimination from the new treaty of all reference to the immigration of laborers as covered by the existing treaty of 1894, which the new convention is intended to supersede. The western senators, however, offered no arguments against ratification beyond demanding time in which to obtain an understanding of its provisions.

An executive session of the senate was convened shortly after 5 o'clock tonight to consider the new treaty. Several senators were immediately curious to know why there was such haste to have the treaty ratified. Although this reason was not stated the general belief was that the committee desired action before the western states had time to memorialize their representatives to oppose it, should the elimination of the immigration clause be deemed obnoxious to the interests of the Pacific slope. Senator Lodge stated that the administration desired prompt ratification as an additional proof of the cordiality of this government toward Japan.

Hale Blocks Program.

The treaty might have slipped through had it not been for Mr. Hale. Mr. Lodge had made a speech declaring that there was no danger of objectionable immigration under the treaty, because that question would be taken care of by laws and police regulations, and for the additional reason that Japan, through diplomatic channels, had assured this government of her intention to exercise the most rigid control of passports. At this point, however, Mr. Hale interposed objections to ratification.

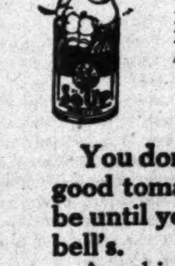

No fault was expressed by the Maine senator with the immigration feature, but he charged that it involved reciprocity with Japan as objectionable to orthodox protectionists as that contemplated in the reciprocity agreement with Canada.

Mr. Hale's comment aroused great interest. On every side senators who had been disposed to accept without question the report of the committee on foreign relations pressed him for an explanation. With a display of sarcasm Mr. Hale told his colleagues that they would do well to "take nothing for granted" since the Canadian agreement was brought in.

Former President at Union League Banquet Also Favors Canal Forts.

AIMS AT TREATY FOES.

Criticises National Legislators Who Oppose Trade Treaty with Canada.

frained from undertaking the task of digging the Panama canal.

Must Not Stop Half Way.

"Thank heaven we did not take that position. We undertook to do the task because we said it was in our bailiwick. We made two treaties which gave us the right to dig that Panama canal; first with Great Britain and then with Panama.

"There had been originally a treaty with Great Britain which proposed to neutralize the canal. The senate of the United States rejected that treaty, with my cordial concurrence. I was governor of New York at the time, and I publicly expressed the ardent hope that they would reject it, for the reasons I have given.

"They then negotiated a new treaty which explicity recognized our right to fortify the canal. It did a little more than that. Before I sent that treaty (I was president then) and before I sent that treaty in to the senate I had before me written communications from Lord Lansdowne, then the British secretary of state for foreign affairs, and of the ambassador, Lord Pauncefote, explicity stating that there was no objection to America fortying the canal.

Duty to Fortify Canal.

"More than that, in that treaty we guaranteed that, inasmuch as no other powers were to be allowed to have anything to say about the canal, we would agree to police it, to keep it open, to protect it. Now, gentlemen, if you agree to do a thing you have got to do it.

"It is our duty to fortify the canal; there are no two sides to that question. In our treaty with Panama we explicitly reserved the right to fortify it.

"The other day, when the president was down there, there were two ships, equal in size to the Dreadnought, two of the most formidable ships afloat, belonging to the Brazilian navy, the crews of which had just gone into rebellion against the Brazilian government. As they were outside of the law as regards their own government, they were outside of the law as regards any other government. Nobody could tell what they were going to do. It is our business to see that the canal shall be rendered safe from any sudden raid by any power.

What Would Happen in War.

"Supposing, for instance, we did not fortify the canal and we had war with some power. That power would not be bound by treaty. There are no treaty obligations affecting anybody but ourselves, England, and Panama.

"All other nations of the world are absolutely free to take any action they wish about that canal if we are at war with them. Any outside nation, excepting the two I mention, England and Panama, if we had a war with the nation, would be justified at once in seizing the canal as a war measure against us. Now, have you thought of that? I wonder if our peace advocate friends, the men who have protested against our fortifying the canal, have thought of that simple and elementary fact.

"If we ever were engaged in war with any serious foe and that foe could damage us by taking the Panama canal, it would do it out of hand and, what is more, the other nations of the world would feel no emotion on the subject, excepting an emotion of utter contempt for us because we had shown such craven blindness to our own interests.

Fleet Is Sword, Not Shield.

There are people who said, Don't fortify the Panama canal; let the navy protect it. It is a little bit difficult to argue with a man of that stamp, frankly, gentlemen, either because he has not thought about the subject at all, or he has made up his mind he will think crookedly. Now I say that deliberately.

The one cardinal principal with the fleet is that it must be kept together and used to hit the enemy's fleet. The fleet is not the shield, it is the sword. The worst thing you can do with the fleet is to scatter it along to protect coast ports, because by scattering it you change each vessel into a very inferior type of fortification.

"Mind you, an anchored vessel is inferior, greatly inferior, to a fort. An enemy will never attack a serious fort, under modern conditions as long as the opposing power has any power at all. It can't do it, it can't make a serious attack on a fort, because it can't afford to run the risk of having its ships put out of action.

Cites Port Arthur Example.

"You look at the attack on Port Arthur. The Japanese fleet kept away out of range of the fortifications at Port Arthur until the fleet protected by these fortifications was rendered absolutely harmless, and even then it never exposed itself to the guns of Port Arthur.

"No serious naval power would ever dream of using the navy to attack ports until the enemy's navy had become a negligible quantity. The great advantage of a port is that it leaves the navy absolutely foot loose, that when you protect the important ports you render your navy free to be used so as to strike and disable the enemy and keep the enemy off our coast.

"People have said to me, a good gentleman said to me today, 'But you could not build a fort that could not ultimately be taken.' I said, 'Certainly, you can't build any fort that won't be taken if our navy is destroyed, but you can build forts that could not be taken for six months or a year, and in a month or two, or in ninety days certainly, we could recover command as long as our navy existed, we could recover command of the seas and relieve the port.'

Leave Canal to Own Resources.

"We want to leave the Panama canal so that the forts will protect our ships in it if necessary, and not that our navy is to be diverted from its proper use to protect the canal, and therefore just to that extent to neutralize the navy.

"Now, friends, I want that canal fortified because I want you to pay heed not only to Washington's firm determination that this nation shall act with justice and honor, and in a spirit of genuine love of peace toward all other nations, but also that we shall remember what he said when he asked that we 'make our neighbors and our fellow men as happy as their frail convictions would permit.' I do not want to tempt an enemy of frail convictions to seize the Panama canal because we have been such fools that we have not fortified it.

"Now, friends, in the last twenty-four hours I have learned from you all here a great deal more than I could ever begin to try to teach you. I shall go back to New York freshened and heartened—I don't think I need much encouragement—to go on along the lines I have marked out for myself; but if I had need of it, you would have given it.

Favors State Experiments.

"Now, one of the great advantages of our federal government, of our system of government, is that each body of citizens is allowed to try the experiments for furthering its own welfare which it wishes without being hampered by outsiders, and without being obliged to conduct a crusade to make those outsiders take the same methods, and there are different needs in each state.

"In New York I am regarded as a dangerous radical. From my correspondence with one of the Oregon senators I gather that there are some of the Oregon people who think me a timid conservative, a view with which I wish they could inoculate Wall street. I don't ask that any state follow blindly any other state. It is of the utmost advantage to all of us that all kinds of experiments shall be tried. All we have a right to ask is that the experiment be tried with honesty and with a sincere desire to work for the common good.

"The two tendencies that I am most anxious to see obtain in American life are, first, the resolute purpose to go forward; and, next, the resolute purpose to be sure that any step taken really is a step forward before we definitely commit ourselves to it Must Meet Evils.

"Let us make up our minds neither to be improperly allured by mere names or improperly frightened by mere names. It is idle, and worse than idle, for us to say that there are not evils necessary to meet. As Count Apponyi has said this evening, in addition to raising the standard of private effort, of conscious and character, there must be a change in institutions to meet changing needs and to mark advance.

"I hope to see us advance ground step by step in securing adequate control in the public interest of the great corporations through which the leaders of the business world are now so apt to give expression to their industrial activities.

"I wish to work steadily by every resource in our power to better the condition of the wage worker, to make his lot in life more desirable, to make him a better American citizen, and I wish to do that, not only in his interest—I wish to do it in our interest, for no section of our people can sink without the effect ultimately being felt throughout all the body politic. If some of us go down all of us will suffer more or less.

"I hold that the whole justification for our experiment in free government, in democracy, that the whole justification for men here going into politics lies in their duty to try to raise higher the standard of our citizenship."

Count Apponyi's Address.

Count Apponyi, who preceded Col. Roosevelt, said, in part:

"The whole evolution of mankind shows us that every progress is accomplished by putting permanent institutions instead of the caprices and of the changing whims of individuals as the starting point. Humanity without institutions means anarchy or despotism. And by slow degrees anarchy is reduced in limits through institutions that shape out rules for men to conform to.

"Now, gentlemen, in the solution of the peace problem I think the United States has to take a leading part. This is not a mere compliment which I intend to pay to you. It is not one of those compliment which an international orator usually pays to every country.

"You are better qualified to take the banner of mutual good will among nations into your hands. You have less to risk by doing it. You have a natural claim and a natural duty to fulfill that mission on behalf of mankind. No higher glory can you ever attain."

Norton's Tribute to Roosevelt.

Secretary Norton in his speech said:

"Let us rejoice that in the end we shall have, as education brings out the truth a century hence, two presidents, equal in power and glory: Washington and Roosevelt, and they both true to education, that education which is not only a good to be encouraged by the government, but a vital thing to be provided by the government, for by the soul only nations are great and free."

ROOSEVELT'S MORNING SPEECH.

The doctrines of the "new nationalism," the progressive spirit through which the United States is destined to approach in more complete measure the ideals of democracy, were expounded by Col. Roosevelt in the first of his Washington day addresses, at the Auditorium theater in the morning.

Before an audience that numbered fully 4,000 persons and filled every available seat in the big auditorium, Col. Roosevelt pleaded the cause of broader application of the principles of popular government and of higher citizenship on the part of the individual.

Chief among the doctrines of the new nationalism and democracy which Col. Roosevelt advocated were:

Election of United States senators by popular vote.

Right of individual states to try out the doctrines of the initiative, the referendum, and the recall, each state to govern itself in the light of the success or failure of its experiments.

Broader application of the powers implied in the constitution.

Exact justice between the "big business" corporations and the community and individual.

Federal intervention in foreign affairs according to the needs of smaller nations and to the highest principles of democracy.

Awakening of the public political conscience to the abolition of political corruption.

Raps at Lorimer Election.

If one doctrine more than another drew approbation from his hearers, it was the former president's flatfooted declaration for the election of United States senators by popular vote. In it Col. Roosevelt took a rap at Senator Lorimer and the method of his election in the Illinois legislature.

"I emphatically believe in a change in the constitution which will permit the election of United States senators by popular vote," he declared. "In New York today we are trying the old system and we cannot elect a senator at all, and the last experiment in Illinois in electing a senator "——

"Lorimer!" "Give it to him!" came by way of interruption from several parts of the auditorium and was mingled with handclappings of encouragement and approval.

"I say that Illinois' last experiment in electing a senator under the old system was not wholly a happy one," continued Col. Roosevelt. "We should apply the same principle in the election of senators as we have adopted for the election of presidents. Then if we do not elect good men we are to blame. When you get the power to elect senators directly, you will have gained the power to do right if you have it in you.

Discusses Direct Election.

"Now, very good friends of mine, men in whose intention and in whose wisdom, as a rule, I have great confidence, have made elaborate arguments against any change from the provisions put into the constitution for electing United States senators. Now, let us examine it for a moment.

"The people who founded our government made enormous steps forward on the path of democracy. I am glad that they did not begin to go as far forward as I wish now to go. If they had gone as far forward at once as I think it advisable now to go, we would probably have had just such a smashup as occurred in the French revolution, where men started to do pretty good things so quick that they finally did them in a manner so bad as to bring about inevitably an action toward the worst in the past.

"Most fortunately our people proceeded gradually. They were wise in doing so. They were wise in only going so far beyond what then existed as they were confident would work well. Now the same thing is true. That they stopped does not mean we should stop.

Right to Try Experiments.

"The initiative, the referendum and the recall are political theories much talked about. Whatever one thinks of them, it is folly to treat them as ends and not means to an end. I believe that each state has the right to try them as experiments, as methods for more representative government. If the new methods fail to give better government then they are failures. Let them be tried out in practice. It is idle to treat a desire to obtain such methods as criminal, as some opponents have done.

"We must do strict justice to the corporations and demand justice in return. The bulk of power must not come into a few hands. I do not ask changes in the constitution, but that the principles laid down in it be applied to present day conditions and needs. The growth of 'big business' must be met by growth of power of the people to control it."

Roosevelt Removes Flowers.

When Col Roosevelt stood up to speak and when the applause had subsided some one shouted:

"Take away them flowers, we can't see."

A big bunch of American beauty roses hid the speaker from a portion of the audience.

"All right, friend," Roosevelt replied and the roses were passed from hand to hand until they disappeared behind the scenes.

Roosevelt's smiles disappeared when a troop of pygmies were led across the stage seeking seats. These are employed in a local theatrical production and when they began hunting for places to sit down on the stage the audience began to applaud.

Then the cheering for the former president began again and the smile returned.

CRITICISES THE ARRANGEMENTS.

The arrangements made for handling the crowd at the Auditorium were criticised in the following letter:

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I don't know whether your reporter who covered the Roosevelt meeting at the Auditorium this morning realized it or not—since he may have got in in a pleasanter way—but the arrangements made for handling the crowd were positively barbaric.

I had a reserved ticket and arrived on time, yet when I tried to enter was taken by the collar and thrown back. There was no chance for me to reach my seat in a civilized way. I did so only by bluster, and climbing over the seats and knees of people already seated for two-thirds the width of the house.

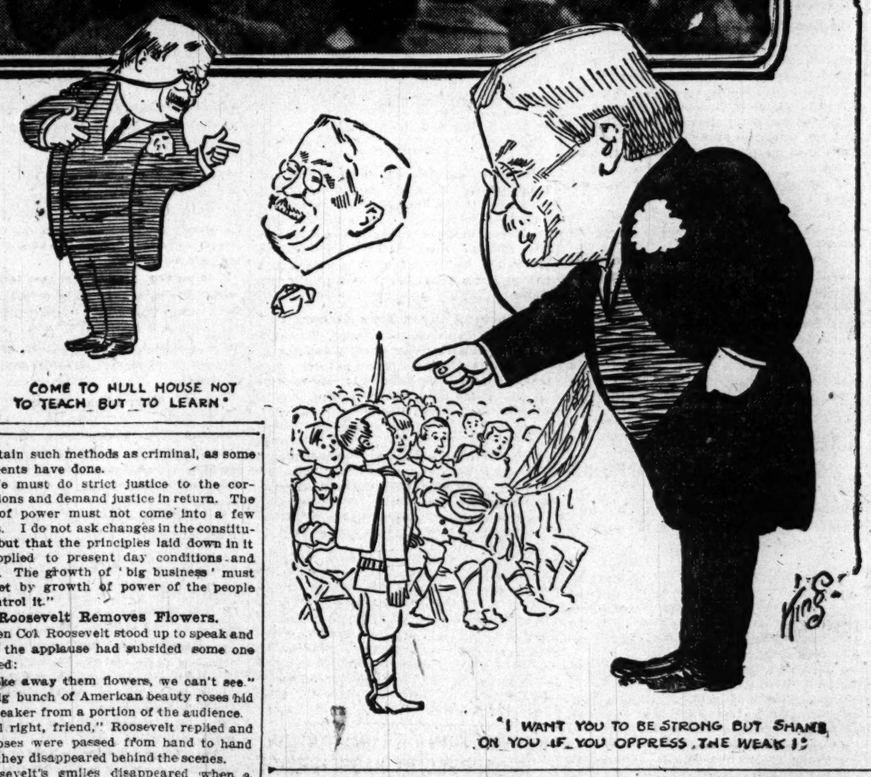

My wife, who arrived ahead of me, likewise with a reserved seat ticket, after being pushed and mauled and having her hat torn off, was shown into the wrong seat, and, believing it to be the right one, refused to move. Her own seat in the row in front was already taken by a man who refused to move. There were no ushers in sight to straighten out the difficulty, and none could be induced to come near.

I got the seat beside her by bluff, depriving its rightful owner, and this because others had deprived us. It was altogether unfair all the way around. A SUBSCRIBER.

ROOSEVELT SEES OLD FRIEND.

Colonel and President Morrissey of Railroad Employes and Investors' Association Confer.

Col. Roosevelt held a brief conference with P. H. Morrissey, president of the American Railroad Employes and Investors' association and former head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The talk between the two was of a personal nature, Mr. Morrissey having been on friendly terms with Col. Roosevelt for several years.

"There was nothing of public interest in my conversation with Col. Roosevelt," said Mr. Morrissey. "I have known the colonel several years, and he took advantage of his presence in Chicago to send for me for a brief personal chat."

TELLS OF SCENES IN AFRICA, WHERE LIONS MENACE TRAINS.

Col. Roosevelt, at Orchestra Hall Meeting, Relates Amusing Experiences to Students and Teachers.

Col. Roosevelt began his afternoon of activity in public speaking under the auspices of the Union League club, by addressing a meeting of high school students and teachers at Orchestra hall, at 2 o'clock.

Charles D. Norton, secretary to President Taft, also delivered an address on "George Washington and His Plan for the City of Washington," at this meeting.

The former president, after admonishing his youthful hearers that it was not sufficient for them to remember with respect the achievements of the great men of the past, but that they must themselves contribute to the history of today, announced that he would tell them of some of his experiences in Africa.

He said in part:

"We went down through the Red sea and the Indian ocean below the equator on the east side of Africa. We then came up on a railroad that has been built to the great central lakes of Africa, crossed Uganda, and came down the Nile to Khartoum and Egypt. I stayed long enough in Egypt to give them some good advice [laughter] which was received with well dissembled gratitude. [Laughter.]

"The railroad journey is much as if you had unexpectedly built a railroad through the Garden of Eden. Adam and Eve were conspicuous by their absence.

"The telegraph messages sent by the Hindoo station officials are sometimes amusing. One ran as follows:

"'Llon has been trying to get at the yardmaster, who is now up the telegraph pole. Warn train not to stop at the opposite station and people to be careful about getting out.'

"Another time a lion tried to get inside the station and finally jumped on the roof and tried to get inside the station, and the Hindoo inside sent an agitated telegram running: 'Lion fighting station. Help urgently necessary.'"

At the close of Mr. Roosevelt's address the chairman introduced Mr. Norton.

Mr. Norton said there was no George Washington in that group of pioneers that laid out Chicago, and that as a result this city today is unnecessarily ugly.

Avalanche of "Handshakers" Sweeps Platform After Former President's Address—Hat Knocked Off.

Col. Roosevelt got a real taste of the Chicago brand of strenuosity and at the same time was called on to display tact, quick wit, and physical prowess at the close of the Washington day meeting in the First Regiment armory late in the afternoon.

"No! No! I can't shake hands with all of you this time," shouted Col. Roosevelt as the members of the party massed about him in a football charge for the rear door. But the crowd swept down upon the little group. First Col. Roosevelt's hat was knocked off and the rush swept him off his feet. He clutched at an arm and regained his balance as two stalwart policemen pushed through the crowd and seized him from either side.

The armory was cleared and the crowd dispersed quickly after Col. Roosevelt's automobile disappeared in Michigan avenue.

Settlement Lads Give "American Welcome"; Former President Addresses Scouts.

Col. Roosevelt's schedule tied itself in a knot in the afternoon, and an unfortunate situation might have developed save that Miss Jane Addams took things in her own hands and untangled the program.

By the time the Washington day celebration at Orchestra hall was completed it was past the hour when the ex-president was scheduled to speak at Bowen hall, in Hull house. John E. Wilder, president of the Union league club, decided the address before the boy scouts at the board of trade building must be abandoned. So the automobile containing the Roosevelt party hurried down Jackson boulevard and sped past the board of trade building.

In the street several thousand people who had been unable to gain entrance to the building recognized Roosevelt in the automobile and set up a shout of protest. The chauffeur pushed his throttle up another notch and the automobile dashed on toward Halsted street.

Boy Scouts Are Insistent.

Those in charge of the boy scout celebration in the board of trade rooms refused to be turned down by any program committee and immediately telephoned to Miss Addams at Hull house.

"Tell the colonel 3,000 boy scouts are waiting for a word from the honorary vice president of the organization," went the message over the telephone.

"I'll tell him," Miss Addams replied.

True to her word, she interrupted the president after he had talked for ten minutes in Bowen hall.

"Have I time to go on a little bit," Roosevelt asked her.

"We would like to keep you with us a long time," she said, "but they have just telephoned to me that 3,000 more boy scouts are awaiting for a word from you at the board of trade. We don't want to keep you if you'll go speak to them."

"Tell them I'll stop there a minute on my way to the First Regiment Armory meeting."

His Address at Hull House.

Col Roosevelt then proceeded with his address as follows:

"I think the truest principles of American life are displayed in Hull house. I always have wanted to come here. I do not think I can teach you anything, but I know I can learn much from you.

"I want you to develop the virtues of strength, courage and ability to hold your own but at the same time you must be gentle. And then you must bring all the ability you possess to the benefit of others.

"The same evil that is shown in unrighteous war is shown in the boy who is unkind to the weak and ungentle to those who depend on him. I want you to be strong, but shame on you if you ever oppress the weak. You must grow up into strong citizens but into gentle ones as well. A man who mistreats his wife is no earthly account as a citizen.

"I want to see Hull house duplicated in New York."

The Hull house boys' band played at the meeting in Bowen hall. After his address Roosevelt pleaded for "just one more tune," and Miss Addams directed the band to play a medley of American airs.

Returns to Boy Scouts.

Immediately thereafter Col. Roosevelt, true to his word, hastened to the board of trade where the Boy Scouts still were waiting.

When he did reach this gathering he briefly commented on the ideals of the Boy Scout movement, pleaded with boys to strive to be gentle as well as courageous, and declared that though they fought wrong bitterly they never should reach a plane where they let themselves hate the individual who did wrong.

The former president then retired to the Union League club to secure a brief rest before delivering his evening address.

CALLS NEW CODE UNFAIR TO WOMEN

Secretary of Illinois Manufacturers' Body Says It Stops Their Progress.

OPPOSES PROPOSED LAW.

Labor Should Not Be Restricted to 54 Hours a Week, He Asserts.

John M. Glenn will fight the proposed amendment to the state law making the limitation on woman labor fifty-four hours a week. Mr. Glenn is secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

He said the principle on which the woman's ten hour law was declared constitutional by the Illinois Supreme court is wrong.

In his address last evening at the annual meeting and banquet of the Chicago Retail Merchants' association at Vogelsang's he asserted he favored woman suffrage and unlimited opportunity for women in every activity.

"As the ten hour question is the one with which I have had the most to do," Mr. Glenn said, "and as the guardians of union labor, who secured the passage of the statute generally known as the woman ten hour law, have announced through the press that they propose to extend its scope beyond factories and laundries by making it apply to your business and shorten the time to eight hours a day, I will speak concerning it.

Does Not Believe in Restriction.

"I am not in sympathy with the legislation restricting the privilege of women to sell their labor, because I do not think it morally is right. Such legislation is not progressive and is not in the interest of woman. It is not along the line which will give her a greater field of usefulness, and cannot be supported consistently by those who take what is known as the advanced position as to woman, and who want to emancipate the fair sex from the restricted environment which they say surrounds her.

"Those who support legislation of this character must believe, it seems to me, in the theory that man mentally is stronger and in every way more capable than woman, and that on account of his superiority he has a right to retard her advancement.

"Feathered Men Strut About."

"But is it known to all men that a woman is at great disadvantage in the battle of life? Has she ever failed to do her part? Among all uncivilized people she is made to do virtually all the work while man adorns himself with feathers and ornaments and struts about. Man ever has reasoned that he was stronger mentally and physically than woman, but he has always made her wait on him. He always has made her carry the burden. She has brought in the wood and hewn the stone, made bricks of straws, and all that. She has been hitched with a mule, and she plowed the fields and did her work and a man's at the same time. Would the agricultural counties of this state vote for men who indorsed a measure that prevented a woman from doing as she pleased on a farm or would curtail her effort to do her part of the work?

Says Give Woman a Chance.

"I am for woman. I am sorry any have to work at all, and I do not believe they would have to work so hard if the men were not so lazy, and did not go around talking about women being hen minded. I believe in giving her a chance at whatever occupation she wants to undertake. I believe in giving her the ballot if she wants it.

"It has been demonstrated in the last twenty-five years what woman can do in the business world. It has been demonstrated what she can do in stores such as you gentlemen conduct. It would be impossible for you gentlement to return to the old way of carrying on your business, and it is impossible for you to get along without her assistance.

"Why does a woman prefer factory work to that of being a domestic in a household? Does she not go to the factory because the work is easier and the surroundings more congenial? Can she find a household where she can limit her hours to ten in any one day or fifty-four in any one week?

Not Right to Force Women.

"I do not think it is right for an employer to take advantage of the pecuniary conditions that may have overtaken an employé and force him or her to work beyond his or her mental or physical capacity. I can say for the manufacturers who opposed the enactment of the present law that they did not want to overwork them.

"If a change in the statute is to be considered and an effort made to shorten the day, I earnestly hope that the matter will be given such thorough attention by the people of this state that the general assembly either will amend the law to include all classes of labor in which women are employed or repeal the measure entirely.

"You have paid the state for the privilege of conducting your business in corporate form. You gentlemen represent widely separated districts in this city, and you should have a great deal of influence with the members of the general assembly from Chicago."

PRIEST GETS DEATH THREAT; DEMAND IS MADE FOR $3,000.

Letter in Polish Sent to Father F. M. Wojtalewicz—Police Fail to Locate the Senders After Search.

A three days' search has failed to locate the senders of a communication to the Rev. Francis M. Wojtalewicz, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Eighty-eighth street and Exchange avenue, South Chicago, in which he was threatened with death unless he placed a package containing $3,000 in a garbage box near his residence.

The letter, written in Polish, was received by Father Wojtalewicz, Saturday. It demanded that he place the package containing the money in the alley behind 8711 Exchange avenue, and to address it "S. W." A demand was made that the money be delivered between 6:30 and 7 o'clock Saturday evening.

Father Wojtalewicz turned the letter over to Capt. Plunkett of the South Chicago station, and detectives left a decoy package in the garbage box. After concealing themselves they awaited the arrival of the would-be extortionists, who did not appear.

The message to the priest concluded with these words: "Don't investigate. If you don't leave the money you will die from the bullet of a revolver. Choose between death or the money."

Father of Five Children Denies Charges Made by Assailant—Wounded Deputy Is Recovering.

Miss Anna Pearson, who wounded Deputy Sheriff Otto Gnewuch after she had tried to kill Charles W. Smith, a photographer employed in the county building, yesterday asserted she was sorry she did not kill Smith.

"I am ready to prosecute him when his case comes up tomorrow before Judge Newcomer.

"I am glad the deputy sheriff was not killed."

Smith, who lives with his wife and five children at 6334 Star avenue, denied her charges.

"I met her at Fox Lake last summer at the Illinois hotel," he said. "She sat down beside me when I was eating dinner. I saw her only once or twice since. She came to me one day this winter and demanded $300, which I refused to give her. Later she demanded $200."

Otto Gnewuch, the deputy sheriff injured while aiding in disarming the young woman, is recovering. He lives at 2336 South State street.

BOMB SUSPECT ARRESTED IN SALOON AT PISTOL POINT.

Italian Accused of Complicity in Causing Death of Rockford Woman Is Taken in Chicago.

James Lapangi, accused of complicity in throwing a bomb last Tuesday in Rockford, Ill., which resulted in the death of a woman and the wounding of her two year old daughter, was arrested in a saloon at Gault court and Oak street last night.

The arrest was not made until Detective James T. McGraham of Rockford and five local policemen had pointed their revolvers at Lapangi, who had drawn a knife as soon as he saw McGraham enter the front door. Lapangi will be taken to Rockford today. According to McGraham, the prisoner was accused at the coroner's inquest of having threatened Mrs. Annie Vitola, the victim.

The bomb was exploded shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning, and when the police arrived they found Mrs. Vitola dead in bed. At her side was her daughter, whose right arm was blown off.

An attorney fee of about $100,000 may be paid Attorney Henry D. Laughlin, 295 La Salle street, for his services in the Cherokee Indian land suits, which have been in litigation for more than twenty years. The United States Court of Claims yesterday made a decision giving negroes, whom the Cherokees had held as slaves, "equal rights" with the Indians. The former slaves and their descendants now have property rights in Oklahoma valued at millions of dollars.

PATRIOTIC PUPILS ON STRIKE

"Study on Feb. 22?" "Not Us," Say Palatine Boys and Girls.

HEAR DRUM; FALL IN LINE.

Leave School Building; March Down Town and Raise a Flag.

Rebelling against attending school on Washington's birthday anniversary, the scholars of the Palatine High school deserted their desks yesterday morning and paraded the streets in an enthusiastic demonstration of patriotism. From the seniors down to the children in the first grade, 172 in all, the boys and girls marched about the town for two hours.

Three of Older Boys Leaders.

Three of the older boys were the originators of the "strike" which caused a general exodus of pupils from the high school building within an hour after classes were called. These were Harvey Taylor, Walter Stroker, and George Harz.

Securing a fife, a drum, and a large American flag the trio began their demonstration in front of the school house. They had played two rounds of "Yankee Doodle" when the children came rushing out the main entrance in response to the appeal. In a few minutes the entire enrollment was in the street.

Raise Flag Near Town Hall.

Down the main street the line marched noisily. In front of the tall flagpole near the town hall it stopped. The pole was bare. Entering the village hall they secured a big flag. Singing and cheering they slowly raised old glory. Then they formed a circle about the staff and shouted and blew horns.

The procession was again formed and visits paid to the residence of B. L. Peck, president of the board of education, and other members of the board.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION IS OPPOSED BY RABBI HIRSCH.

Says in Washington Birthday Anniversary Address Curtailment Should Be Limited to Diseased and Criminals.

Restriction of immigration except in the cases of criminals and disease afflicted was denounced as un-American and unworthy of the ideals of the founders of the government by Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch at the Washington birthday anniversary celebration given under the auspices of the Illinois Society of Sons of the American Revolution in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night.

"In this great country, which has a population of 93,000,000, and has room for 1,000,000,000, it is un-American to urge the restriction of immigration and the cutting off of this nation as a haven for the oppressed of the world," said Rabbi Hirsch. "It has been the blood drawn from other peoples that has made this nation what it is. In this melting pot of liberty the people of the earth have been transformed into the American people.

"There were no Americans before Washington—they were Virginians, North Carolinians, New Yorkers, and Vermonters. They had to lose their provincialism in as bitter a struggle as any which ever transformed the provincialism of a foreign born citizen.

Dr. Hirsch was orator of the evening in place of Congressmap J. Adam Bede of Minnesota, who was kept away by illness. Other speakers were Bishop Samuel Fallows, Gen Joseph B. Leake, James E. Brown, John D. Vandercook, and Mrs. L. K. Torbet, regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

DIES SAVING BABY IN WRECK.

Woman Hurled Out of an Auto and Struck by Train Pays with Life for Devotion to Child.

Mrs. Thomas Nash, 1403 Melville place, who was injured in saving her 14 months old child when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a passenger train, died yesterday at St. Joseph's hospital.

The accident happened Feb. 19 at the Grace street crossing of the Chicago-Milwaukee railroad. The engine of the automobile "died" as the machine reached the middle of the tracks, right in the path of an approaching train.

Mr. Nash jumped out, but Mrs. Nash waited to stand up in the car to hand the infant to her husband. Before she could jump the train struck the auto, hurling her out. The baby and husband escaped unhurt.

SEEK BOY AND KIDNAPER.

Chicago Police Join In Hunt for Spaniard Alleged to Be Holding Boy for Ransom.

Despite an all day search through the congested districts of the west side yesterday, the police were unable to secure any trace of Norman Stern, the 15 year old son of Samuel Stern of Milwaukee. The boy was abducted on Feb. 18 by a Spaniard, whose name is said to be Joseph Antonio.

It is thought he was lured away by promises of the Spaniard, and is now being held in Chicago for ransom. Dispatches were sent to the police of large cities throughout the country. The father of the boy arrived in Chicago in the morning and asked Capt. Stephen Wood of the detective bureau to aid him.

The boy's mother also is in Chicago. She wished to join in the search with her husband, but was told that it would be more advisable to remain at the hotel.

TELLS LOVE IN A DEATH NOTE

Kenilworth Young Woman's Admirer Swallows Poison in Hotel.

SHE SOBS ON HEARING NEWS.

Says "I Liked Him, but Not We Enough to Be Married."

Charles H. Miller committed suicide yesterday in the Kavanagh hotel, 1600 Wells street, by swallowing poison.

A note in which Miller directed that all of his belongings be given to Miss Loretta Adams of Kenilworth and declaring that she "was the only girl I ever loved" was found on a table, together with a photograph of the young woman.

Refused Proposal, Says Girl.

Miss Adams, who is employed in the household of Robert S. Smith in Kenilworth, was in a state of collapse last night following the announcement of Miller's death.

"He asked me many times to marry him," she said as she sobbed. "I refused him, because, although I liked him, I did not think I loved him well enough to be married. In a letter I received from him a week ago he said he would commit suicide if I did not promise to marry him, but he added, 'Ha! ha!' and I thought he was only joking. I have known him for several years, and he has often called on me.

Gas Inhaled by Another.

Fritz Wauthier committed suicide by inhaling gas at the residence of his brother-in-law, Frank Clausen, 1835 Sedgwick street, late Tuesday afternoon. His body was discovered yesterday morning.

RACES AHEAD OF POLICE.

Finally Wounds Himself and Is Captured at Doctor's Office, Where He Goes for Aid.

Robert Braun, a demented metal worker created a brief reign of terror last evening on the north side.

He was captured by detectives, who traced him by the intermittent explosions of his firearms. Braun was caught while having a wound dressed in a physician's office at North Halsted and Willow streets, more than two miles from where he had started out on his wild run. His injury was inflicted by himself accidentally a bullet grazing his hand. He lives at 1845 North Halsted street.

Braun entered the shoe repairing store of Joseph Strumpf 442 North State street about 6:30 o'clock. He carried a magazine gun and a dangerous looking revolver.

"Comes to Right Wrong."

"You have made trouble for my family!" he exclaimed, "and I have come to right that wrong. Look out!"

Strumpf leaped from his seat, but before he could reach the crazed visitor two shots were fired, both taking effect. One struck Strumpf in the right shoulder and the other shattered the fingers of his right hand. The police removed him to the Passavant hospital.

Strumpf shouted a warning and darted through an alley east to Cass street. While detectives from the Chicago avenue station were looking for him he knocked on the door of the residence of George Ickner, 126 Illinois street.

Mrs. Ickner opened the door and Braun brushed her aside and entered. Three children were seated in the dining room and Mr. Ickner was standing in the kitchen when their unwelcome guest burst in, waving his weapons.

Fires Wild Shots.

Braun fired three or four wild shots in quick succession, dashed out of the house, and ran west. Detectives Troy and Stromberg got a glimpse of him, and pursued. Braun managed to keep far in advance until he disappeared through a doorway, and rang the bell at Dr. J. L. Eisendrath's office, 1733 North Halsted street. Some one notified North Halsted street station.

Detectives Barker and Haager overpowered and handcuffed him after a fight. He was taken to the Chicago avenue station.

HAMMOND GETS NEW MAYOR.

Becker, Appointed Judge by Governor, Is Succeeded by Controller of Indiana City.

Hammond, Ind., had no mayor for a time yesterday and today is without a city controller. Gov. Marshall's appointment of Mayor Lawrence Becker as judge of one of two new branches of the Lake county Superior court caused the situation.

John D. Smalley, for six years controller of Hammond, through succession, it was found, now is mayor and will hold office for three years, the unnexpired portion of Mayor Becker's term. He will have to appoint a new controller.

The former mayor as Superior court judge will hold office for two years. He has been mayor for seven years. Johannes Kopelke of Crown Point was appointed judge of the other new court created.

BODY IN ICE NOT CHICAGOAN'S.

Relatives Say John Retinger, Who Disappeared Two Months Ago, Still Is Missing.

Relatives of John Retinger, who disappeared from his residence, 5412 Calumet avenue, almost two months ago, yesterday established that the body found frozen in the ice of Lake Michigan near Chesterton, Ind., was not that of the missing man, as first supposed. Members of the family said in the evening that they had received no trace of Mr. Retinger since his disappearance. They fear he became mentally unbalanced, wandered away and was killed by robbers. He wore two diamond rings when last seen.

400 "VOTERS" HIT BY STEAM ROLLER

Czarnecki Decides Names of Those Ignoring Subpœnas Must Go Off Records.

NULLIFIES OWENS RULING

Judge Burke Acts in Contempt Case When Election Board Attorney Backs Austrian.

The Hearst-Harrison steam roller, which has been the chief feature of the daily fraudeville staged by the election commissioners, blew up at the close of the last performance at midnight, severely injuring over 400 non-bystanders.

Those injured were the very ones which the steam roller has been protecting, the lodging house denizens of Ald. Kenna's bailiwick. They were all hit in the same spot, the franchise, greatly impairing their earning power for this month and April.

This reversal of form on the part of the election machinery was due to a ruling, insisted on by Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki, the minority member, that the names of those who failed to respond to subpœnas should be erased from the records. A ruling of Charles Mitchell, attorney for the board, a few days ago, had led Kenna's forces to believe that all cases in which the complainants did not produce evidence would be decided in favor of the would-be voters.

Motion Passed at 12:30 in Morning.

The motion was passed by a vote of two to one, Commissioner Kellerman dissenting, at 12:30 this morning, after Attorney W. L. Martin, the colored representative of the Kenna-Brady Demo-Republican First ward combine, had indulged in half an hour of fervid oratory, appeals to the constitution, threats to drive a four horse team through the primary law, and promises to get out an injunction to prevent the men being forbidden to vote. He will appeal to Judge Owens, but a reversal is unlikely, as the judge concurred in Commissioner Czarnecki's construction of the law.

Commissioner Czarnecki had still another bomb for the managers and beneficiaries of the show. He let it be known that he has had a conference with State's Attorney Wayman and that he is going to see to it that the state's attorney receives a transcript of all the evidence taken before the board on which to base a thorough investigation of First ward corruption.

Earlier in the day Attorney Francis Walker, representing the election commissioners and Judge Owens before Judge Burke in the Ryan contempt case, admitted that in the investigation which he had asked time to make he had been unable to find anything either in the facts or in the law to refute the argument made by Attorney Alfred Austrian the day before.

Nullifies Owens Ruling.

He said that he deplored the attack on Judge Owens' intelligence and honesty, but joined with Mr. Austrian in recommending that Judge Owens' order of commitment to jail for contempt be considered void. Judge Burke refrained from commenting on the act of his brother jurist which he nullified.

Judge Owens was in his chambers much of the day deliberating on the subject of "tin star" detectives and corrupt notaries. The trial of the notary cases worked up by Paul Matthews, head of the bureau of frauds, has shown that many men failed to sign their affidavits in the presence of the notary who subsequently affixed his seal to them.

The Graham people contend that since each of these citizens has since proved his right to vote under oath in Judge Owens' court the omission has been cured as to them, that they committed no criminal act, and that their names cannot be erased.

Reward of $500 Offered.

The attitude of the Hearst interests is the antithesis of this. They contend that Judge Owens should order the names struck off, and should send a special deputy to each precinct with a list of the names affected there to stay there during the whole of election day and see that the names are not voted.

The answer of the Graham forces is the publication of a reward of $500 for evidence of violation of the primary law which will lead to the conviction of "any person or persons, be he special officer of the election board or any other person." Attached to the reward is the section of the act which makes it a crime for the judge to "refuse to receive the vote of a qualified primary elector at such primary who will make the affidavit and proof required by this act."

Turn to Graham Territory.

Election officials were not as vociferously inspired by the evidences of First ward fraud which cropped out at the fraudeville as at those discovered in Graham territory. W. L. Martin, Ald. Kenna's colored attorney, however, seemed to be of the opinion that they should not be noticed at all, and when Commissioner Taylor, a Hearst editorial writer, joined Commissioner Czarnecki, the insurgent minority, in questioning the veracity of a First ward suspect, his indignant emotion almost overcame him.

A complaint was filed against Patrick Sullivan, 296 South Clark street. The clerk of the hotel swore that he was "not there." Later a man came in and represented himself as Patrick Sullivan. He said he had been there "over ninety days" "off and on." He could not fix the date more definitely. He was passed over Commissioner Czarnecki's objection as usual.

Welsh Writes Name "Walsh."

A man responded to a suspect notice for James M. Welsh, 449 South State street. He signed his name to the preliminary affidavit at the door of the court room, James M. Welsh. Commissioner Czarnecki noticed that the signature differed from that on the original affidavit and asked him to write it again when on the stand.

He wrote it James M. Walsh. Then he said his name was Walsh, then that he was known both as Walsh and Welsh. Attorney Martin then explained that there must be two men at 449 State street with similar names. At the evening session a man was produced who signed his name Welsh all the way through. Both were passed by the divided board.

McCarthy Charges Harrison Plot.

Chairman John McCarthy of the Democratic county committee declared that every part of the legal election machinery of the city was being used to help nominate Carter H. Harrison as mayor.

"Judge Owens and the election board are working hand in hand with 'Hinky Dink' and 'Bathhouse John' with their following of First ward sluggers and repeaters to debauch the primaries for Harrison," the chairman declared.

"As to what 'Hink' is going to do in the First ward, we know all about. With only 8,000 legal voters in the bailiwick they have 10,000 registered.

"They have imported 150 new repeaters in the last few days—twenty came in last night from Cincinnati and are at the Illinois at 515 South State street. But we are going to be ready for them, and if there is a fair election next Tuesday Graham will carry the First ward."

THOMPSON QUERIED; SMULSKI DEFENDS VOTE.

Merriam Wants to Know Rate of Interest County Received—Action in Ogden Gas Case Explained.

In the series of questions, pertinent to the mayoralty campaign and to which THE TRIBUNE is giving publicity, the following directed to John R. Thompson by Ald. Charles E. Merriam is herewith appended:

"What rate of interest was paid on the county funds when you were county treasurer, and how was the interest computed? Was any audit made of interest returns, and, if so, is this available for inspection?"

THE TRIBUNE tomorrow will publish such reply as Mr. Thompson may care to make.

Mr. Smulski took cognizance of the question propounded to him by Ald. Merriam regarding his (Smulski's) vote for the Ogden gas merger in 1900. Mr. Smulski says:

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—After a microscopical examination of my record in the public service for fifteen years, Ald. Merriam attempts to criticise a single vote of mine while a member of the city council.

I voted in 1900 for the ordinance amending section 15 of the Ogden Gas ordinance of 1895. I was not a member of the council when the Ogden Gas franchise ordinance was passed. One of the arguments advanced in favor of the passage of the original ordinance was that with two competing gas companies the price of gas would be lower and the service better.

The people will remember that it worked just the other way. The price did not go down and the service became worse. It was understood that the interest in control of the old gas company had acquired the Ogden Gas company. I was in favor of doing openly what was being done surreptitiously. A consolidation under the law at that time would have resulted in immediate lowering of the price of gas. I represented a ward containing many people of limited means who were users of gas; because they wanted cheaper gas was one reason for my vote; the other was a fundamental one.

I have always believed that one public utility corporation can supply a given public service better than several and that that particular corporation should be under the strictest municipal regulation and control as to price and character of the service rendered. The city should have access at all times to the company's books, and the city should receive payments from the corporation for the franchise granted, such payments to be based on a percentage of receipts.

Since my service as alderman is under discussion I call to your attention the various reports of the Municipal Voters' league of Chicago. In 1899 they said: "His record in the council is good; stood firmly for people's rights against corporate aggressions; should be reelected; recommended by league."

In 1901, while differing with me as to my vote on the gas ordinance amendment, the league characterized me as an able and efficient alderman and recommended my reelection. The people subsequently elected me city attorney in 1903 and in 1905 reelected me on my record in public office. I was the only Republican elected in 1905, running 43,000 votes ahead of my ticket. When I ran for state treasurer the people again showed their approval of my public acts and their confidence in me by giving me the unprecedented majority of 72,000 votes in Cook county alone. This action of the people at the polls indorsing my record ought to answer the question as to my availability as a candidate who can command the support of the people.

JOHN F. SMULSKI.

GRAHAM AT SEVEN MEETINGS PLEADS FOR CIVIC HONESTY.

Wants Every Voter Who Doubts His Integrity to Support Some Other Candidate for Mayor.

Andrew J. Graham declared at seven meetings last night that he considered honesty the keystone to good government, and added that he wanted every voter who believed that the speaker would not make an honest mayor to vote and work for one of his opponents.

"The secret of successful government is honesty," Mr. Graham said. "Not just passive honesty, but honesty of that practical form that spells efficiency. If every task undertaken, no matter how small, were placed in the scales and weighed against honesty and efficiency, our municipal government would be a credit instead of a target for attack.

"The city of Chicago should be likened to a great corporation, wherein all the citizens are stockholders and its affairs should be conducted in the same careful, conscientious manner that the affairs of any other corporation would be administered.

"This has been the one thought uppermost in my mind throughout this campaign, and I have refused to be swerved from my position, notwithstanding the attacks of orators who have endeavored to inject into the campaign matters foreign to the real issues.

"Corruption and wasteful expenditure of public money should be stopped at once and every dollar paid in by the people should be honestly administered for their benefit. The taxpayer should receive 100 cents in value for every dollar he pays into the city treasury, the same as he demands in every business in life."

Mr. Graham will speak tonight at Twenty-sixth street and Trumbull avenue in the Twelfth ward; at Ninety-second street and Cottage Grove avenue, in the Thirty-third ward, and at Sixty-first street and Cottage Grove avenue, in the Seventh ward.

SMULSKI AVOIDS POLITICS TO SPEAK ON PATRIOTISM.

Declares Public Servant of the City Should Follow the Footsteps of George Washington.

John F. Smulski, following the example of his Republican mayoralty rivals, will enter the downtown arena today for a noonday meeting in the Princess theater.

In his speeches yesterday he avoided politics and devoted himself to patriotic remarks appropriate to Washington day.

"The civic conscience," said Mr. Smulski, "has been awakened and there has spread over this land, in the last three or four years, a new idea of government. It is that public service is a public trust, and that a man who honestly and faithfully serves his country in a time of peace is as much entitled to credit and to be placed upon the nation's roll of honor as a man who shoulders a musket in time of war.

"Service to the city, the state, and the nation was the keynote of Washington's great benefit to the American people. Washington's efforts were honest, self-sacrificing, and devoted to the ideal public servant. The ideal public servant of today should be the same.

"A spirit of patriotism and loyalty should rule all his actions; a better spirit among public employes must necessarily result in greater efficiency and greater municipal achievements."

THOMPSON SEES 4,250 PLURALITY

Gives Second Place to Merriam and Third to Smulski at the Primaries.

96,000 VOTE IS BASIS.

Declares in Speeches He Does Not Want to Be Drawn Into Row with Rivals.

A plurality of 4,250 in a total Republican primary vote of 96,000 was figured out for John R. Thompson yesterday by his campaign manager, Charles A. McCulloch, who gave second place to Ald. Merriam, with John F. Smulski third. The estimate was exhibited at a luncheon meeting of Sixth ward friends of the mayoralty candidate in Vogelsang's.

Mr. McCulloch's tabulation gave Thompson 34,500; Merriam 30,250; Smulski, Scully, and Murray together 31,250. At other political headquarters the usual expectation is that at least 100,000 votes will be cast at the Republican primaries, since 96,614 votes were cast in the city at the county primaries last September.

Would Avoid a Controversy.

Mr. Thompson spoke last night in American-Bohemian hall on West Eighteenth street with Joseph E. Bidwill and Corporation Counsel Brundage. In general terms and without using figures, he answered the questions of Ald. Merriam regarding the interest rate he received and the sum he turned back on county funds when county treasurer.

"A number of questions have been raised by one of my worthy opponents," said Mr. Thompson. "I know Ald. Merriam as an excellent man. I do not care to be drawn into a controversy with him. I do not think that the Republican candidates for mayor should indulge in mudslinging in this campaign.

"I will not allow myself to be placed in the position that I must answer innumerable questions. I have too much faith in the average man to believe that my business record of twenty years in Chicago and the success that I have attained and my record as a public officer as treasurer of Cook county can be destroyed in a political campaign."

Meetings for Today.

Six meetings at which Mr. Thompson will speak are listed for today. At noon he will talk in the Colonial theater. Tonight he will go to Yates hall, Archer avenue and Halsted street, in the Fourth ward; Aldine hall, Thirty-fifth street and Indiana avenue, in the Third ward; Central hall, Twenty-second and Wabash avenue, First ward; McKinley Park hall, Thirty-fifth street and Archer avenue, Fifth ward, and Sokol hall, Thirteenth street and Forty-first avenue, in the Thirty-fourth ward.

DUNNE CHARGES A PLOT TO STEAL PRIMARY ELECTION.

Declares Old System of Repeating and Shifting "Gangs" from North to West Side Will Be Used.

Edward F. Dunne in five addresses in five different wards last night warned his hearers that all sorts of attempts would be made next Tuesday to steal the primaries for the friends of graft and bad government.

"There is a conspiracy of political black legs to steal the primary election," he said. "It is a curious commentary upon the intelligence of our political overlords that they never seem to do anything new. They have been operating gangs of repeaters in west and north side wards for years. The same men attend to this detail at every election. One is a protector of pickpockets, the other is operator of a gambling syndicate. They exchange repeaters.

"The north side gang is sent to the west side and the west side gang is sent to the north side. That process assures double efficiency in piling up fraudulent votes.

"Then there is what is termed chain voting. It begins with the passing of a ballot by the voter at the head of a line to the voter next in line, and is continued as long as the election criminals can find creatures to keep it up. I am informed that these processes can be made to produce not less than 10,000 fraudulent votes.

"Then there is the plan of employing an excessive number of so-called workers to man the polls.

"We were informed at the beginning of this contest that one candidate proposed to hire twenty workers in each voting precinct. He intended to pay 20,000 men $5 each—for what? Would it not be more truthful to admit that in thus spending $130,000 the real intent is to buy 26,000 votes outright? It is bribery, pure and simple."

CANDIDATES TO DINE TOGETHER

Five Republican Mayor Aspirants Accept Invitation to Hamilton Club's Ante-Primary "Love Feast."

All five Republican candidates for the mayoralty nomination who have been hurling attacks at each other daily for the last week will sit together at noon today at the Hamilton club's ante-primary Republican "love feast" in the club rooms.

John H. Batten, president of the club, said last evening that all candidates had accepted invitations.

"We are gratified," he said, "at having obtained acceptances of the club's invitations from each of the five men invited, and I am sure all members of the club will enjoy the fifteen minute speeches each of the candidates is privileged to make."

WARNS AGAINST 'LORIMER MAYOR'

west side organizations came out for Thompson, and now are active in his campaign.

O'Donnell, personal friend of Lorimer and attorney for Lee O'Neil Browne, when the latter was tried for bribing legislators to vote for Lorimer for United States senator, was announced as a speaker for Thompson. David S. Shanahan is supporting Thompson. All Lorimer men!

"In fact, on primary day, Feb. 28, Thompson will get every vote that the Lorimer men in the Fourth, Fifth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Thirty-fourth wards can swing, after they have induced every willing Republican to vote at the Democratic primary for Graham instead of their own party primary.

"Now it is proposed to nominate for mayor of Chicago, on the Republican ticket, a man without whose aid Lorimer might not now be sitting in the United States senate.

"Be it remembered that Sollitt and Apmadoc, who were ordered by Thompson to vote for Lorimer for United States senator, had been ordered by their party, voting in an advisory capacity at a direct primary, to vote for Albert J. Hopkins for United States senator.

"Yet now is Thompson running at a direct primary, promising in a loud voice to abide by the result of that primary. Do not forget that he ignored a primary, and caused others to ignore it, when he went to Springfield for Lorimer."

MERRIAM SCORES SMULSKI FOR REPLY ON "GAS GRAB."

Says Denial of Vote in 1895 Is No Defense to His Action on Ordinance in 1900.

Ald. Charles E. Merriam, speaking last night in the Fifteenth, Fourteenth, and Twenty-fifth wards, with Ald. Beilfuss, told three large audiences that the answer of his Republican mayoralty rival, John F. Smulski, touching the latter's Ogden gas record when an alderman, was "neither frank nor convincing."

"It is no answer to the charge that Mr. Smulski voted for the gas grab in 1900," said Mr. Merriam last night, "to say that he did not vote for the gas grab of 1895. The fact is there were two gas grabs, the latter of which Mr. Smulski voted for and which Mayor Harrison vetoed.

"Mr. Smulski not only voted for this vicious measure, but he voted down amendments to it in the interest of the public. These were as follows:

"Providing for 80 cent gas.

"Providing that on streets about to be improved gas pipes should be laid in the streets to prevent tearing up the pavement when so directed by the commissioner of public works.

"Requiring $1,000,000 compensation to the city for the privilege of consolidation.

WOMAN IN HARRISON CAMPAIGN.

Mrs. W. C. H. Keough, Former School Board Member, Urges Her Sex to Support Aldermanic Candidate, Too.

Mrs. W. C. H. Keough, former member of the board of education, took the stump last night for Carter H. Harrison, and for William O. O'Rourke, Democratic candidate for alderman from the Thirty-second ward.

Under the auspices of the Thirty-second ward Democratic club Mrs. Keough spoke at the auditorium in the Auburn Park bank, Seventy-ninth and Halsted streets. The meeting was attended largely by women.

"For years there has been a certain coterie of politicians to which we women have paid no attention, but when this coterie invades our homes and compels us to pay 95 cents per thousand for gas it is time for us to get busy," said Mrs. Keough. "Mr. Harrison has promised to take an interest in our homes and so has Mr. O'Rourke. I think we should try to influence our husbands to vote for these men."

GRAHAM BACKED BY POLICE NOTE

First Letter of the Kind in Mayoralty Campaign Is Made Public.

TAKES FLING AT DUNNE.

Harrison Also Attacked as Having Opposed a Raise in Pay for Bluecoats.

The first police campaign letter since the inception of the Democratic mayoralty contest was circulated yesterday. It was signed "Patrolman," and instructed all members of the force to vote for Andrew J. Graham for the Democratic nominee for mayor.

"We have docked this man over," the letter said, "and he seems to be the best man for the police to support."

The letter criticises Carter H. Harrison and Edward F. Dunne, insisting that both have placed themselves on record as being opposed to a raise in the police salaries. It takes occasion also to "knock" Ald. Peter Reinberg and Herman Bauler, members of the Harrison managing committee, because they opposed the recent attempt to raise police salaries before the council.

Mr. Harrison never did anything for the police, the letter says, and he vetoed a salary increase measure when he was mayor. Ald. Goldzier, designated as Mayor Harrison's "council floor manager," is quoted as saying that $60 a month was enough for any policeman. Mr. Dunne is declared to have vetoed a council ordinance to raise the salary of patrolmen from $1,200 to $1,400 a year, "although $40,000 was contributed to his former campaign fund."

"Mayor Dunne pleaded that the city could not afford the increase because there was no money," the letter continues, "but in his campaign speeches now he boasts of leaving a surplus of $4,000,000 in the city treasury."

According to reports in political quarters, William F. Stine, head of the United Police, and the majority of the members are favorable to Mr. Dunne's candidacy.

HARRISON JABS GRAHAM FOR AVOIDING REPORT ON FUNDS.

Candidate Continues to Tell Voters of His Intention to Cut the Gas Price if Elected.

Carter H. Harrison at two meetings in the Thirty-third ward last evening called attention to the fact that no report of campaign expenditures had been made by the managers of Mr. Graham or the banker candidate himself. Mr. Harrison also hammered away at the necessity of cheaper gas.

"I have set 70 cents as the maximum price of gas, if I am elected mayor," Mr. Harrison said. "There are some who would have you believe that I am for that price only. I want to see the people get their gas at the cheapest possible price. Investigation has shown that it can be furnished at 70 cents and probably cheaper with a fair profit to the company."

George A. Schilling, for four years a member of the board of local improvements under Harrison and Dunne, was made the accuser of Andrew J. Graham in a statement issued at Harrison headquarters.

According to the statement, he charges Mr. Graham with approaching public officials during Mr. Schilling's term of office in the interest of contractors who had defaulted in city contracts for paving.

"BE GOOD," ADVICE OF BARTZEN.

Says County Employes Will Be Retained as Long as They Maintain Efficiency.

Notwithstanding his summary suspension of Supervisor John Welsh of Oak Forest infirmary and of two probation attendants at Dunning, President Peter Bartzen of the county board issued a message of "reassurance" to all civil service employes of the county yesterday, in which he stated that as long as they maintained their efficiency they would not be discharged.

President Bartzen ordered that the civil service commission take up an investigation of charges concerning the disposition of children by the Juvenile court.

A third case of smallpox was discovered at the county hospital in the morning. Evald Norsen, a cook, was removed from Ward 22 to the Isolation hospital. Previous to his admission to the hospital he resided at a lodging house in State street, near Harrison.

VETO BILL PASSED BY THE COMMONS

Asquith's Supporters Cheer Him for Victory Over the House of Lords.

WINS BY GOOD MAJORITY.

Winston Spencer Churchill Makes Attack on the Referendum Proposition.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Premier Asquith was cheered by his supporters in the house of commons tonight when the veto bill, designed to curtail the power of the lords, was passed on its first reading by the government's full majority of 124, the vote being 351 to 227.

The Nationalists first rose in their places, cheering wildly and waving their hats. The Liberal members quickly did likewise. This exhibition was repeated a few minutes later as the prime minister quietly left the scene of his victory in his initial action against the lords.

The debate today presented few new points. The dominant note of the Unionist speeches was an invitation to the government to settle the matter by agreement. Frederick E. Smith said the British people would support the opposition in any resistance they might offer to the bill.

George Wyndham also urged the government to settle the question by agreement. Otherwise, he declared, sooner or later the opposition would repeal the bill.

Reply Made by Churchill.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the home secretary, concluding the debate for the government, replied that the ministers would not have fifty supporters left if they agreed to enter such a conference now.

He contended that no step should be neglected to carry the bill swiftly into law. The government did not fear the referendum as a check on progressive legislation, but regarded it as a vicious system, especially unsuitable for this country, and its adoption would lead to Jacobinism, Cæsarism, and anarchy.

Mr. Churchill stated that among the legislative proposals to be submitted, in addition to home rule, would be a measure for creating a fair and evenly constituted second chamber.

Embarrassed by Chance Question.

A chorus of shouts came from the opposition members: "When?"

He was momentarily embarrassed and sought refuge by declaring he could not reveal the government intentions in answer to a chance question.

Lord Lansdowne, leader of the opposition in the upper chamber, announced his intention to introduce a bill to amend the constitution of the house of lords. This is regarded as the Unionist answer to the government's veto bill introduced in the house of commons yesterday.

Second Reading Next Monday.

The second reading of the veto bill will be taken up Monday, when Austin Chamberlain will move an official opposition amendment welcoming the introduction of a bill for the reform of the house of lords but declining to sanction a measure placing all legislative authority in the hands of a single chamber.

Much comment was caused today by the absence of Chancellor Lloyd-George from the house of commons. He has gone to Brighton again and is still obliged to take the greatest care of his throat.

After a long period of indecision Lord Lansdowne, leader of the opposition in the house of lords, gave notice of a bill for the reform of the upper chamber, and a meeting tomorrow of the Unionist members of the house of commons to urge this course on their peers.

More Peers May Be Created.

This turn of affairs, the Unionists contend, implies that the house of lords either will reject the veto bill outright or introduce amendments which it will be impossible for the government to accept, with the result that the government will be compelled to prorogue parliament until after the coronation, and then decide whether to create a sufficient number of peers to force the bill through the house of lords.

It is understood that Lansdowne will propose not only to alter the constitution, but the powers of the upper chamber, and an attempt will be made to send the bill to the house of commons before or at the same time the house of commons sends the veto bill to the upper chamber, so that the two projects may be before the country simultaneously.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh next week will submit to the house of lords a bill for the introduction of the referendum on occasions of great national importance.

KAISER'S DICTUM CAUSES STIR.

Reversal of Ruling for Dismissal of Count Who Attempted Suicide Praised by Progressives.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—The kaiser's dictum reversing the findings of the military tribunal which recommended the dismissal from the army of Count Hans Pfeil, who attempted to commit suicide, has created a deep impression.

Strict Catholics and Protestants are shocked, but there is a chorus of approval from progressive circles, especially those where the kaiser's opinions usually are met with unfriendly criticism. The Vossische Zeitung, which is a Moderate Liberal organ, warmly upholds the kaiser's view that Count Pfeil "is responsible only to God and his own conscience," a view which, it says, is shared by all modern German criminologists.

The Tageblatt urges the abolition of the "suicides' corner" in the cemeteries as the logical result of his majesty's decree. The Berliner Zeitung voices the common remark that the kaiser's views which formerly were mediæval, seem to be tending to extreme modernism.

JOHN STEBBINS. DOROTHY FARWELL. "Artist and Model"

Rouge and powder will take the place or pencils and text books among students at the Hyde Park High school tomorrow afternoon and evening, when a dramatic entertainment will be presented at Rosalie hall, Fifty-seventh street and Rosalie court, by members of the junior class.

The play to be presented is a one act farce by Miss Helen Dagg, a former student at the high school. It is entitled "His Model Wife," and is laid around the complications in which a young artist finds himself entangled when a model who has been posing for him is thought by his relatives to be his wife. All complications are straightened out, however, when he finally discovers he really is in love with her and asks her to marry him. He is accepted.

Those who will have leading parts are Miss Dorothy Farwell, Miss Carroll Cody, Miss Jessie Brown, Miss Kathleen Colpitts, Miss Marjorie Ullman, Miss Gladys Miller, Miss Charlotte Sampson, Richard Kuhns, John Stebbins, and Harold Dick.

The play was staged under the direction of Maurice Kuhns. Following the evening production a dance will be given.

JEWS GAIN POINT IN DUMA

Pale May Be Abolished if Stolypin Supports Bill.

PEASANTS DEFEND THE ACT.

Say Provinces Gain in Prosperity by Presence of Race.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 22.—The duma tonight, by a vote of 208 to 138, declined to express an opinion for or against the bill providing for the abolition of the Pewish pale, which was introduced last summer, but referred the bill to the committee on the inviolability of person to make a report.

The bill, which favors giving to Jews the right of unrestricted residence in Russia, originally was supported by 166 members of the opposition and center.

Jews Pleased by Progress.

Jewish circles here are greatly pleased at the progress made today. The bill will undoubtedly undergo restrictive amendments in committee, but a great point was gained in the support of the Octoberists, and it is considered that the bill will pass the council of the empire if Premier Stolypin supports it.

Characteristic speeches were made by the peasant members today in defense of the Jews. One declared that Taurida province was in a prosperous condition, indicating that the Jewish element was desirable. M. Gulkin, deputy from Bessarabia, said the expulsion of the Jews would be disastrous.

Urge Exile of Leader.

The marshals of the nobility have decided to ask the Bessarabian nobility to expel Vladimir Purishkevich, who is a member of the third duma and vice president of the Union of True Russians, for unbecoming conduct at the elections for the Besarabian marshal.

HOW THE LONDON SUFFRAGETS PLAN TO DODGE THE CENSUS.

Parties to Be Held on Night of Enumeration—Guests to Subscribe to Pay Fines.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The suffraget leaders who decreed a boycott of the census have devised a scheme by which they hope to enable their followers to evade the legal penalties attaching to such action.

Among the features of the scheme is one providing for the assembling of suffragets as guests at the residence of one of their number on the night the census is taken, the guests subscribing according to their means to pay the fines, unless they are prepared to go to prison for not paying.

Another plan provides that where the householder is the husband of a suffraget the latter will give a census party, not telling her husband the names of her guests, so that he will not be able to fill in the schedule.

Where women cannot arrange census parties they are advised to spend the night away from their homes, walking about if the weather allows.

ENGAGED 18 TIMES; WILL WED AFTER TWENTY-FIVE PROPOSE.

Mrs. Vera Widen-Schatzman of St. Louis Says "Yes" After Exercising Prerogative to Her Heart's Content.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—After being engaged eighteen times, but exercising a woman's prerogative in each case, and receiving twenty-five proposals in a year since she was divorced, Mrs. Vera Widen-Schatzman finally said "yes" to Le Grand Jones and they will be married tomorrow. In confirming the report of the engagement, Mrs. Schatzman said:

"Do you know, I've been engaged eighteen times since my divorce. I've had twenty-five proposals, but my first experience was so unhapry that I couldn't make up my mind for a time to marry again. One of the men who proposed to me was an Italian count."

The domestic troubles of the Schatzmans attracted much attention, because, when they parted, Mrs. Schatzman announced that it was a trial separation to see whether they could get along without each other. Subsequently she announced she had decided to make the separation permanent.

RUSSIA EXPECTS TO ADJUST DISPUTE WITH CHINA EASILY.

Answer to Four Out of Six Points in Foreign Office Note Reported to Be Satisfactory.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 22.—The foreign office announces that China's answer to four out of the six points in the Russian note relative to the treaty of 1881 is satisfactory, and that the remaining two can be easily adjusted. The idea of a military demonstration has been abandoned.

Pledges Violated by Chinese.

PEKING, Feb. 22.—It was remarked at the Russian legation today that the matter of guarantees for the fulfillment of China's pledges had not been discussed up to the present.

It was declared that China recognised the treaty of 1881, defining the respective rights of the two governments in Mongolia and Chinese Turkestan, but nevertheless violated its provisions. Chinese sources report that Russian troops are approaching the frontier at one or two points.

AMERICAN FACES DEATH AS A SPY

Harry C. Dell, Arrested in Mexico, Appeals to California Friends.

TRIAL TO BE HELD TODAY

Cincinnati Man Is Seriously Wounded While Inspecting Outpost of Rebel Camp.

Tia Juana, Mex., Feb. 22.—Harry C. Dell, an American, arrested as a spy by the federal forces, today sent an appeal to friends in California to save him from execution. Dell says he came to Tia Juana to stay over night after his automobile had broken down, and denies any connection with the rebels. He is said to have been a sergeant in the United States infantry in the Philippines. He is 28 years old, and says his wife lives in New York City.

Trial to Be Held Today.

Dell was arrested with a man of Mexican descent, who also claims to be an American citizen. It was expected today that both prisoners would be tried by drumhead court martial and that their executions would follow immediately, but later it was said the trial would not be held before tomorrow.

The commander of the United States troops on duty at the border has issued a warning to all Americans to keep away from Tia Juana.

American Seriously Wounded.

Mexicali, Mex., Feb. 22.—An American member of the insurgent band, said to be W. E. Clark of Cincinnati, was seriously wounded while inspecting an outpost of the rebel camp. According to one version of the incident, Clark was shot by a Yaqui Indian, a scout.

The Indian now is under arrest. Gen. Berthold alleged that the man accidentally shot himself while climbing over a wire fence. Berthold denounced the American Red Cross, saying it had refused to send a surgeon to attend Clark.

With all wires cut by the insurrectos, United States Signal corps men at Calexico used the heliograph today to communicate with the town of Andreade, and confirmed the report of the rebel attack on the Mexican town of Algodones, opposite Andreade, and the killing of one Mexican official and the wounding of another. The custom house at Algodones was burned. The attacking party, it is said, was made up chiefly of young Americans.

May Evacuate Mexicali.

Indications are the Mexican rebels are about to evacuate Mexicali. Three detachments, sixty men, left late today, marching southeastward in the direction of the Colorado dam, south of Yuma. The destination of the rebels is secret.

Representatives of large American interests are much alarmed at Gen. Berthold's declaration of intention to establish a Socialistic commonwealth in lower California.

Doctor Hurt in Auto Wreck.

Burlington, Ia., Feb. 22.—A street car demolished the automobile of Dr. Paul Schafer today, pinning him under the wreckage. He suffered a broken hip, bruises, and possibly internal injuries.

BIG SLIDE IN PANAMA CANAL

Pioneer Cut Opposite Culebra Is Filled with Rock and Earth.

PUZZLE FOR THE ENGINEERS.

Theories Upset by Descent of 500,000 Cubic Yards of Material.

COLON, Feb. 22.—Upsetting all theories and all estimates, 500,000 cubic yards of rock and earth slid into the pioneer cut just opposite the town of Culebra. It is one of the worst slides the canal commission engineers have had to contend with. It is worse than any previous slide, from the fact that others could be explained or even predicted.

May Change Canal Plans.

The latest avalanche of earth changes canal plans materially. It makes it seem necessary that the entire prism shall be enlarged sufficiently to prevent any occurrences of the sort after the completion of the canal. There seems to be no doubt that all of Gold Hill will have to be removed, which in itself is a considerable undertaking, and 335,000 yards of the slide itself represents waste. The remainder it was intended to remove.

Slide Is Without Precedent.

It always has been held that slides were caused when heavy rainfall made the earth soggy, and the sloping beds of rock beneath slippery. When the weight overcame adhesion and when concussion of dynamite blasts gave sufficient impetus it was believed the slides took place. But the Gold Hill slide is without precedent. There have been no heavy rains in this section for six weeks and there has been no blasting in the vicinity for more than a year.

MADOLE NO MATCH FOR M'FARLAND

Packey Wins All the Way in His Six Round Bout at Philadelphia.

OPPONENT STANDS GAFF.

Chicagoan Unable to Knock Out Pittsburger, Although Landing at Will.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Packey McFarland of Chicago tonight used all his science and skill in an endeavor to put out Frankie Madole of Pittsburg, another claimant for lightweight honors, in a six round bout before the American A. C. McFarland won all the way on points, but Madole stood the gaff, exchanged punches with the stockyards champion and came back for more just as if he liked the punishment.

Time after time McFarland connected with Madole's jaw, but the Pittsburg boy only shook his head and waded in for more. When it is taken into consideration that Madole has been fighting for only two years and is only 19 years old, he must be considered a fighter. At the end of the battle McFarland congratulated the little fellow. The boys fought at catch weights, each weighing around 135 pounds.

FIRST ROUND—Madole put a light left to the face and McFarland poked a left to the ear. Madole drove a short right to the body and McFarland hooked a left to the jaw. McFarland repeated and they exchanged rights to the body. McFarland swung a left to the neck and drove a right to the wind. McFarland swung a right to the neck and they exchanged left swings to the body. Madole put a light left on the face and McFarland uppercut a right to the chest. Packey smashed a right to the heart twice and Madole swung a left to the ribs. Each put both hands to body. They clinched twice, and McFarland staggered Madole with a right to the jaw at the bell. It was McFarland's round.

SECOND ROUND—Madole put a left to the wind and each swung a left to the neck. Madole put a right to the ear and McFarland hooked a left to neck. Frankie jabbed left to the nose and McFarland swung both hands to the jaw. Packey swung a left to the neck twice and Madole drove a right to the body. McFarland uppercut a right to the neck and then sent both hands to the wind. Madole jabbed a left to the nose and McFarland swung a left to the neck. Packey swung two lefts to the neck. Madole put a left to the face. McFarland played both hands to the body and hooked a left to the eye. McFarland jabbed a left to the mouth and swung a right to the ear. McFarland's round.

THIRD ROUND—McFarland jabbed two light lefts to the face and swung a right to the ear. Packey shook Madole with a right swing to the jaw and then swung a right to the head. Frankie landed a left to the wind and a right to the neck. McFarland swung a right to the ribs. McFarland smashed both hands to the body and hooked a left to the jaw. McFarland swung a left to the neck and Madole swung a right to the jaw. It was evident McFarland was letting up. McFarland swung a right to the jaw and Madole swung a left to the ribs. McFarland played both hands to the body twice at the bell. McFarland's round.

McFarland Uses Both Hands.

FOURTH ROUND—Madole swung a right to the ribs and McFarland swung both hands to the jaw. McFarland swung both hands to the head and body. McFarland hooked a left to the jaw and smashed a right to the heart. Madole swung a left to the neck and McFarland swung a left to the ear. Madole shot a right to the neck and McFarland swung both hands to the ear. McFarland put a left to the chin and they exchanged right swings to the jaw. McFarland hooked two lefts to the jaw and Madole swung a right to the chest. McFarland sent both hands to the body at the bell. McFarland's round.

FIFTH ROUND—McFarland swung both hands to the neck and hooked a left to the jaw. Madole swung a right to the face and McFarland sent a right to the ear. McFarland sent a right to the wind twice and Madole jabbed a left to the mouth. McFarland swung two lefts to the neck. DILLON HAS SHADE ON GARDNER.

Indianapolis Fighter Has Better of Ten Round Bout with Clever Boston Middleweight.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Jack Dillon of Indianapolis had a shade on Jimmy Gardner of Boston in their ten round bout here tonight. The easterner had a clever defense and only his ability to keep Dillon at long range prevented him from holding the local man on even terms in the earlier rounds. Dillon, however, wore his opponent down and made a strong finish. The newspaper decision was in favor of Dillon. Only one round of the fight could possibly have been awarded Gardner, this being in the fifth, when he used a repeated left jab. In the other nine rounds the milling was even in four, and against Gardner in five.

BALL MAGNATE STOPS FIGHT.

Telegram from President Navin of Detroit Causes Catcher Schmidt to Postpone Bout with Gorman.

Fort Smith, Ark., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The proposed fifteen round fight between Charley Schmidt, Detroit catcher, of this city, and Joe Gorman of Muskogee, Okla., before the Arkansas Athletic club tonight, has been postponed for two weeks. Schmidt received a telegram from President John Navin of the Detroit team advising him not to enter the ring. Although Schmidt had accepted Gorman's challenge and had made preparations for the bout tonight, he decided at the last minute to postpone the event.

CLINCHING SPOILS THIS BOUT.

Jack Redmond and Phil Brock Go Fifteen Rounds to a Draw at Akron, O.

Akron, O., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The fight between Phil Brock of Cleveland and Jack Redmond of Milwaukee tonight was made a tame affair by the clinching. The fight was easily a draw. Brock's right eye was badly swollen at the close of the fight. The last round was sensational and almost resulted in a knockout for Brock. He went after Redmond for the first time in the fight and as the bell rang had his opponent at the ropes and was raining blows upon him. Redmond finished without a mark.

"KNOCKOUT" BROWN BESTS HOGAN IN NEW YORK FIGHT.

Lands Greater Number of Blows, but Fails to Inflict Much Injury on Coast "One Round" Wonder.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Although he did the bulk of the work and landed the greater number of clean blows, "K. O." Brown failed to inflict any serious damage in a fast ten round bout with "One Round" Hogan, the California lightweight, at the Madison A. C. in Harlem tonight. Brown was the winner by a fairly safe margin, but Hogan made a surprisingly good showing.

Hogan had a tremendous right hand swing, and in the first round landed it squarely on his opponent's jaw with so much power that Brown was both staggered and surprised. As the battle progressed Brown's great physical strength began to tell the tale.

Hogan was the better boxer, but was up against a fighter, pure and simple, who cared nothing for blows.

AL KAUFMANN IS A BENEDICK.

Heavyweight Fighter Weds Miss Anneta Seelos, Former Schoolmate. Special Dispensation Secured.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Al Kaufmann, aspirant for the heavyweight championship, was married in this city today to Miss Anneta E. Seelos of San Francisco. Miss Seelos came to this city to meet the big boxer for the nuptials. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. J. O'Connor of St. Mary's Catholic church. Following the wedding there was a wedding supper at Fort Pitt hotel.

The bride is a former schoolmate of the big fighter. Kaufmann shied like a big boy when he led the pretty young woman to the altar. It was a bit of stage fright such as he is not wont to endure in the prize ring.

Father O'Connor secured a special dispensation for the wedding and the bride was received into the church a few hours before the ceremony.

GARY-WHITE GO TO DRAW FANS.

Bigger Crowd than at Any Recent Milwaukee Fights Expected at Tomorrow Night's Fight.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The seat sale for the Tommy Gary-Jack White fight, which is to be held at the National Athletic club show Friday night, is the heaviest at any of the recent fights. Ringside seats are at a premium. One of the largest turnouts of boxing fans since the game has been reopened here is expected. White and Gary are not expected in Milwaukee until Friday morning. In the semi-windup "Kid" Graves, the Chicago boy, who has been making his home in this city for the last couple of months, will have the hardest fight of his career on his hands when he tackles Ray Temple. Jack Dougherty more than likely will be matched to meet Steve Kinney in the second bout of the night.

Mahmout Wins Bout.

Yusif Mahmout, the Bulgarian wrestler, defeated Tom Clayton in straight falls last night at Waukegan. Mahmout won the first fall in 4:00 with a crotch hold and half-nelson, and the second in 12:30 with a toe hold. The Bulgarian will meet Hail Hussane at the Calumet theater in South Chicago Saturday night.

AVERAGES 66 MILES AN HOUR

Merz in National No. 5 Makes the Best Time in Road Race.

WINS EVENT FOR HEAVY CARS

Dingley in Pope-Hartford Takes Free for All at San Leandro.

San Leandro, Cal., Feb. 22.—Three cars divided honors in the Oakland-Panama road race today over the San Leandro and Hayward triangle. The best time was made in the heavy car race, which was won by the National car No. 5, driven by Charles Merz, who sent his big racer over the course at an average speed of sixty-six miles an hour.

Bert Dingley [Pope-Hartford], who lost first place in the heavy car race by the narrow margin of forty seconds, defeated Merz in the free-for-all with several seconds to spare.

Jack Fleming, in the Pope-Hartford No. 1, took third place in both the heavy car race and the free-for-all.

In the heavy car race Fleming led until the tenth lap when he was overhauled by Charles Merz driving his National No. 5. Seeing his teammate's predicament Dingley began to drive like a demon and passed every car except the National No. 5, which made a sensational finish on a flat tire.

The light car race resulted in an easy victory for the Mercer, driven by Bigelow.

As the Amplex finished the heavy car race it ran into Theodore Kirsch of Fruitvale, Cal., a boy, crushing him against the rear of the Pope-Hartford No. 1. Physicians who made a hasty examination expressed the opinion the boy's back was broken.

The day's racing was marked by a number of accidents, only one of which proved serious. At the close of the heavy car race the spectators swarmed over the course before the Amplex could be flagged. With one lap still to go, Driver Turner was not prepared to stop and smashed into the crowd, crushing Theodore Keusch, a young railway clerk, against the rear end of the Pope-Hartford No. 1.

At first it was believed the boy's back was broken, but it was found his right leg was fractured in eight places. It is feared amputation may be necessary.

In the same race the Apperson Jackrabbit was burned after running into an embankment and capsizing. So slowly did it topple over that Driver Harris Hanshaw and his mechanician jumped out of the car uninjured.

In the light car race the Ford overturned, but was righted and reëntered the race.

Motorists Engage Elgin Quarters.

Elgin, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Although the dates for holding the second annual races of the Elgin National Road Race association are more than six months away, hotel accommodations for the week of the races already are being reserved. Four of the best suites of rooms at two of the leading hotels were reserved this week by eastern capitalists who will witness the races. Numerous inquiries have been received by Fred W. Jencks, president of the association, requesting him to reserve accommodations.

GERMANS AFTER AIR HONORS.

Challenge Americans to Race for International Balloon Cup—Chain of Meets Is Planned.

New York, Feb. 22.—Cortlandt Field Bishop, acting chairman of the national council of Aero clubs in America, received by cable today a challenge from the Deutscher Luftschiffer Verband to the Aero club of America for the Coupe Internationale des Aeronauts, won last year by Messrs. Hawley and Post in the balloon America II.

Germany was second in the international race from St. Louis last year and its entry is the first to be received this year. The message says that three German balloons will compete.

Mr. Bishop plans to organize a chain of meets throughout the country to last from May to October under the supervision of the national council. Mr. Bishop said the meets are planned to stimulate foreign competition. He believes that many of the European airmen are eager to fly in America, but are kept away because of the lack of big prize money.

Officials of the Aero club are beginning to feel some anxiety in regard to the selection of a team to represent this country in the international cup race to be held in London during coronation week.

It almost is assured that Glenn H. Curtiss, winner of the trophy in 1909, will not be a contestant. J. A. D. McCurdy, the most promising of the Curtiss flyers, is barred by being a British subject, and it is hardly probable that any other member of the Curtiss team will undertake the race.

PUGILISTIC POINTERS.

Con Comiskey and "Knockout" Brown left for Oklahoma yesterday where both have scheduled matches next month.

Several Logan Square fight fans and admirers of Johnny Coulon will leave for New Orleans tomorrow night to see the twenty round fight between Frankie Conley and Coulon. One party of ten already has been made up and reservations for seats made.

The Continental Athletic club has announced that it will hold a boxing show at Summit on March 4, with the following bouts: Johnnie Miller vs. "Kid" Stewart, 120 pounds; "Omaha Kid" vs. "Kid" Bruno, 140 pounds; "Denver Joe" Smith vs. "Knockout" Wallace, at 135 pounds. The Smith-Wallace bout is at ten rounds for a purse of $100 and a side bet of $100.

TEAM NO. 1 TAKES BIG SHOOT AT GUN CLUB BY 742 TO 700.

Squad Captained by McLachlan Successful in Special Match with Joe Barto's Men.

In the Washington birthday special match of the Chicago Gun club, decided yesterday, team No. 1, captained by A. F. McLachlan of Grays Lake, defeated the squad led by Joe Barto of Chicago, 742 to 700. The contestants on each team fired at 2,100 clay pigeons. Because of the wind, which caused the targets to jump at mean angles, low scores were the order. Louis M. Featherstone of the winning team carried off the honors by breaking 93 out of 100 targets, while Jay Graham, the amateur from Long Lake, Ill., was high on the losing side with 87. Mrs. Louis M. Featherstone broke 16 out of 25 targets from the sixteen yard mark.

CUTS OFF TOES TO GAIN SPEED.

Southern Ball Player Submits to Amputation of Abnormal Pedal Appendages on Doctor's Advice.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—What is believed to be a world's record in operations performed on ball players has been established here by Ed Griffith, a promising minor league player who submitted to having his toes cut off on advice of a doctor to increase his speed on the bases. Griffith always has hit like a cyclone and has fielded and thrown well, but his abnormally long toes prevented speed.

Blackburne Stars on Floor.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Until recently Russell Blackburne, shortstop of the White Sox, has been playing sensational basketball for the Camden team of the Eastern league. He has been playing under the name of "Keating." When some friends recognized him he suddenly decided it was time to give up basketball. He has disappeared, but probably will turn up in Chicago for the baseball season.

J. EVERS COMES TO TERMS WITH CUBS

Trojan, Pleased with the Figures Offered, Signs for Two Years.

HOFMAN OFF TO AKRON.

Unable to Agree with Bosses on Salary; Duffy Plans for Southern Trip of Sox.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Greatly to the disappointment of Klem and Rigler John J. Evers signed a two year contract yesterday binding him to the keystone of the Cub infield. When the news was broken gently to the umps by wire last night they came back with the unanimous reply: "Glad he didn't make it three."

President Murphy offered the second baseman a three year contract, but John said he had found the even numbers lucky and asked to have the document's duration reduced to two seasons. The important transaction occurred as per schedule at a conference in the Cub offices in which club owner, manager, and player took part.

When he emerged from the executive session Evers' face was split wide open by a smile which could not be erased all afternoon even by the prospect that the Cubs would lose Artie Hofman. That the former Trojan was given a substantial increase was apparent.

Evers admitted it and said he was satisfied. President Murphy, when asked the figure, said he would not object if we put it in the paper that Evers had signed for $15,000 a year. It being the anniversary of Washington's birthday we were compelled to wait until after midnight before granting the request.

Size of Salary a Question.

Hofman had a third confab with the Cub magnate, following the annexation of Evers, but did not come to terms. Artie left for Akron last night after bidding good-by to all his friends and vowing he would not come back, but would devote all his efforts to developing his business.

"Of course he will come back," said Manager Chance when asked what he thought of the matter. That was as far as the Peerless Leader would go with the discussion, but it practically is acknowledged that Hofman is demanding a salary which the club officials think exorbitant and that this difference of opinion is a more compelling factor in the temporary divorce than are the demands of the new business venture.

Artie disclosed the fact that he has not altogether abandoned hope of accumulating another batting average of .325 and attaining membership in the coming "600 club," but it was a slip of the tongue. Chance in discussing the training trip said he expected Jimmy Sheckard and Lou Richie to join the team at New Orleans, as they are now in Florida, and he would not ask them to come to West Baden. To a listener who did not catch the finish of the manager's remark Artie repeated it like this: "They'll join us in New Orleans." Pipe the "us."

Jimmy Archer is expected here today and will be the next in line for a contract confab. Besides Archer and Hofman there are only two other Cubs unsigned, the manager said. They are Overall and Pfiester. Chance confessed he did not know whether Overall would report at New Orleans or would stay in California. He said he had not heard from Orrie for some time and did not know his plans. A report was current that Overall had been offered a salary lower than last year's. This President Murphy denied.

Medicine Ball Staggers Chance.

Manager Chance was inspecting some uniform coats with a view to a possible purchase. They are intended to be worn over the players' suits while not actively engaged in the game. Before a decision was reached the manager was handed the bill for medicines and appliances bought by Trainer Semmens for use in his department of the game. The size of the total attracted uniform suits temporarily and Chance remarked: "He was not buying for any ball club. He was buying for the German army."

President Comiskey of the White Sox remained at his offices all day conferring with Manager Duffy, who had been kept so busy shaking hands on the day of his arrival that he had little time to attend to real business. They were over plans for the training trip and part of the championship season.

No further reductions in the roster of players were made, and within a day or so the master of the Sox will be in position to announce definitely on what lineup the manager intends to stand at this spring. Manager George Davis of the Des Moines Western league team was a visitor at the White Sox headquarters and presented a request for one or two recruits in case they fail to make good.

Joe Tinker will be put over the jumps tomorrow night when a party of baseball men, including President Murphy, Manager Chance, and a bunch of players intend to journey out to the Crystal theater where Joe is performing. They want to see his pictures and get some stuff with which to kid him during the season. Tinker's season closes Saturday night and he says he will sit up all night so as not to miss that Sunday morning getaway.

YANKS REPRESENT 12 STATES.

Canada Also Figures in Roster of Chase's Aggregation—Eight Are from Pennsylvania.

New York, Feb. 22.—The New York Americans are a fair sample of the cosmopolitanism of a big league baseball club. Statistics which the club secretary has compiled show that twelve states and Canada figure on the club roster. The states are Vermont, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Texas, New York, Michigan, Virginia, California, and Missouri. Pennsylvania contributes eight of the players; Ohio, four; Illinois, three; Texas and California, two each. The average age of the players is within a small fraction of 26.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS.

BY HEK.

THE SNUFFING OF THE BRITISH 'OPE.

There he goes, there he goes, with his beetle-browed mug,
The seams in his beak and his cauliflower lug;
A lumbering mass and a thick witted slob,
With not an excuse to be called to the job;
Who came in a shape that could never get by
(And if left to himself, perhaps, never would try),
But was made to loom large in the Britisher's eye—
"That 'eroic figure," Bill Lang.

He came warmly touted by Hugh McIntosh,
Who has his own method for copping the splosh,
Who can wind round his finger the "patriot" bunch
And make all the Britishers fall for his hunch.
The McIntosh brand on his hip was enough
To fetch from the Cockneys a cartload of guff,
And have him set up as a "rare bit of stuff"—
This "son of Great Britain," Bill Lang.

With "bravos" the haw-haws swarmed on him amain,
He had every toff in the land in his train;
The "journalists" vied with each other to boost,
And a torrent of praise of his prowess was loosed.
He was hailed as the master of all the brigade
Of champions who came from the country of Slade,
With a mission to put all the rest in the shade—
The "Pride of Australia," Bill Lang.

This "cyclonic fighter," this punch killing bear,
So fondly expected to make it all square;
To make all the pugs on this side take a joke,
To wallop them all—yes—including the Smoke!
O, well, there ain't no bloody word for it now—
When up against Langford he boxed like a cow;
He'd look more at home 'twixt the shafts of a plow—
This "McIntosh champion," Bill Lang.

Tiding over the unfortunate at 10 per cent a month is less romantic than electrifying the populace with circus catches and opportune swats, but seeing that it is the recognized mission of every young man to get a bank roll we have to extend it cordially to Artie Hofman, e'en though the hole he leaves looks like the Royal Gorge. He has to "quit baseball some time," as he philosophically reflects, so why not quit now, when "respectable salaried people" need the money to buy automobiles?

If Hon. Champ Clark would revise his boxing dope we would suggest his taking a slant at the names of the gentlemen who occupied ringside seats at that show in London the night before last. There were some statesmen there who are above handing pitiful soft solder to the hysterical.

AIR 856 IN THE RED BOOK.

George Washington would be dis-tressed
If he'd come back and see
The wick-ed ways we now de-vise
To keep his memo-ree.
He would not brook the box-ing shows,
Where men each-other trim,
But horse ra-ces and chick-en fights,
They always went for him.

A Saint Louis judge has decided that the label "Official American League Ball" is common property for the reason that the words that compose it are not patentable. Therefore, any manufacturer or seller of baseballs can use it without infringement. Of course that judge, in common with every other American citizen, knows that there can be only one "official American league ball," and that all others so stamped are counterfeit and that the intent is to deceive, but the law is a funny thing. The makers of the official "official American league ball" could patent some arbitrary combination such as the "pi" word "Fleischmer-leeg-ball" and stick it on the product and the glut on the judge's decision in case of imitation would be, "Now, that's different," although the infringement would be none the less "colorable."

A BROTHER "IMPROVER."

Denver, Feb. 20.—Dear Teacher: Jack Melville must be one of the gang. Tell him to get off at Cheyenne and drop in here when he comes back.

MIKE.

(Mr. Melville may consider himself staked.)

I. J. G.—Sorry, but we can't let you through with even a veiled boost for your particular mayoral candidate. Besides, accept it from us, you're on a dead one.

The usefulness of boxing in the preparatory work of football candidates has been recognized officially at Dartmouth, which is in New Hampshire, where the people are sufficiently enlightened to differentiate between a healthy exercise and a "brutal sport," and do not condemn the one out of a conventional prejudice against the other.

Well, barring an aperture and a little hesitancy here and there, the baseball aspect on both sides of town is satisfactory, quite so.

LAST GIANT IS OFF FOR SOUTH.

Larry Doyle Heads Party Bound for Marlin, Tex., to Join Squad Already on the Ground.

New York, Feb. 22.—The last squad of the New York Nationals left for the Giants' training camp at Marlin, Tex., today by boat to New Orleans. The party consisted of five regulars, headed by Capt. Larry Doyle. It is expected the entire team will start practice by March 1. It is reported here that Manager McGraw has decided to try Louis Gowdy, the husky young first baseman from Dallas, behind the bat for a while. McGraw is quoted as saying he sees a possible second Bresnahan in the youngster.

ADDIE JOSS IS IN BAD SHAPE.

Trainer Doc White Discovers the Nap Pitcher Has Torn a Ligament in His Throwing Arm.

Toledo, O., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—After a thorough examination of Addie Joss' pitching arm, it was decided by Trainer Doc White that the Nap pitcher had torn a ligament. Joss thought his whip was in pitching condition until White began his examination, then the old soreness reappeared. White is giving Joss vigorous treatment twice daily, but whether his efforts will avail anything is a problem and will not be known until Joss reaches Hot Springs and attempts to put some over.

FISHER STARS IN CLUB ICE EVENTS

Takes Douglas Park Quarter and Mile Races at the Ice Palace.

WINS BY WIDE MARGINS.

Milwaukeean Jumps Into Lead in Both Contests and Holds Advantage to End.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Charles T. Fisher of Milwaukee carried off the honors of the first indoor ice meeting of the Douglas Park Skating club, held last night in the Ice Palace. The Cream City flier won the quarter mile and mile contests, and he was not forced to extend himself in either contest to cross the line a winner.

The Milwaukee skater easily was the class of the field, which included some of the best local speeders. In both contests he took the lead at the crack of the pistol and judged his pace faultlessly. Although some of the contestants tried to take the lead away from him in both contests, Fisher always had enough speed in reserve to maintain his advantage.

Walter Gunderson, who was expected to give the Badger skater keen competition in both races, fell at the start of the quarter, and although he tried hard to catch the leaders, he was not equal to the task, but his efforts landed him in third place. In the mile Gunderson chased most of the way behind Fisher, but on the tenth lap his right knee, which was injured recently, weakened and he was forced to retire from the race.

Fred J. Marzolph, skating from scratch, won the mile handicap after a hard fought contest with Walter Simonson, who had an advantage of forty yards, and Lee Jensen, who was given a twenty-five yard allowances. Summaries:

One mile, novice, first heat, half mile—Won by Budley Case; E. J. Lumpp, second; Otto Htrack, third. Time, 1:35.

BY AMATEUR.

Twelve teams remain in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE 125 pound basketball tournament after three days of strenuous playing. Eight games, the largest number contested in the two tournaments to date, were played at the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. Eight more are scheduled for tonight, the winning teams competing in the semi-finals tomorrow.

Two teams were forced to play two contests each, owing to the fact that thirty-six games were necessary to finish the schedule for the number of teams entered. Evanston Y. M. C. A. came out of both scrimmages with flying colors, downing the Elgin M. E. quintet in the opening setto, 27 to 4, while the Sherman Park Juniors were the victims in the second clash, 23 to 9.

The Sherman Park Midgets, the other team to play two contests, were unable to weather the storm, winning the first contest from the St. Martin A. C., 17 to 7, but losing the second to the "Tribunes" of West Park No. 1, 22 to 7. All contests were featured by hard, clean, and consistent playing, but in most cases the margin of victory was from five to ten points.

With the score tied at sixteen points, the Monitors steamed away from the Russell Square Meteors, and won one of the best contested games of the night.

Through the first period it was an even battle, the Monitors leading 12 to 10 at the interval. The Meteors flashed early in the second and tied the count at twelve all. Two more baskets gave the Monitors the lead, but the Russell Square boys by desperate work got on even terms at sixteen points. From this point on the Meteors went into eclipse and were unable to count again, the Monitors adding five points.

Cross, the right guard of the winners, sprained an ankle after two minutes of play, Herr replacing him. Gowding, the right guard of the Meteors, acted like a star running loose through the milky way, and after committing fouls was put under the horizon. Lineup:

Monitor [25].		Russell Sq. Meteors [16].
Gould	R. F.	Powlak
Bersted	L. F.	Jones, Slowski
Wellington	C.	Humme
Cross, Herr	R. G.	Gowding, Waizel

Grace Trims Armour Browns.

Grace Episcopal five defeated the Armour Square Browns, 27 to 18, the latter side making a plucky fight with only four men. Two of the Browns failed to appear, but the gallant four decided to tackle the churchmen. Grace counted eighteen points in the initial period, the Browns getting six. Undaunted by this deficit the Browns made a great rally in the second half and counted twelve points while Grace was making nine. Williams, the lone forward of the Browns, gave a wonderfully fine exhibition, caging six baskets in the half, while Murphy, a 14 year old player, proved a veritable Horatius on defense. Lineup:

Grace Episcopal [27].		Armour S. B. [18].

"Tribunes" Eliminate Midgets.

Displaying wonderfully fine team work the "Tribunes" of West Park No. 1 put the Sherman Park Midgets out of the running to the tune of 22 to 7. The Midgets counted their seven points in the first half, the "Tribunes" getting twelve in the same period. In the second period the defense work of W. Jarrett and Larson proved too strong for the Midgets, who failed to add a point to their total. Lineup:

Tribunes W. P. 1. [22].		Sher. Pk. Midgets [7].

CONFIDENCE IN BIDDLE.

We have lost no confidence in Mr. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle of Philadelphia. It is true that in action against Mr. Packey McFarland of Chicago he did not do as well as might have been wished, but it must be remembered that Mr. Biddle is only a Hope and Mr. McFarland is a Fact. Possibly Mr. McFarland believed he was displaying courtesy and consideration when he contracted to hit Mr. Biddle only in the nose and to use only a straight left jab in doing so. We are willing to give our fellow townsman credit for a generous impulse, but we fail to see any advantages which might or did accrue to our Hope from it.

The overemphasizing of this important feature of Mr. Biddle's face must have been irritating to him, and no doubt injured his finesse. We are informed that Mr. McFarland connected with the sacrificial member forty times in four minutes, and it must be apparent even to the least informed that such procedure would be disconcerting. If Mr. McFarland had scattered his offerings it might have been fairer to Mr. Biddle. Certainly it would have been fairer to the nose. Mr. McFarland meant it kindly, no doubt, and we let it pass.

We observe with pride that Mr. Biddle demanded no limitations in the combat. A distinguished amateur comes to mind who, before engaging with a professional, stipulated that inasmuch as he had a loose tooth he must not be hit in the face; that inasmuch as he had a weak heart he must not be hit in the upper part of the torso, and inasmuch as he suffered from indigestion he must not be hit in the stomach. He neglected to mention that his kidneys were not all they should be, and the professional, finding that sphere of operation open to him, saw to it that they were not.

Mr. Biddle, we repeat, asked for no conditions, and the selection of the nose was voluntary on Mr. McFarland's part.

THE NEW TREATY WITH JAPAN.

The text of the new treaty with Japan has not been made public, but it is well understood, however, that it does not contain the provision of the present treaty relative to the immigration of laborers and the enactment of laws relating thereto. If the American government had insisted on the retention of that provision the negotiation of a treaty would have been impossible. Nothing of the kind is found in treaties with European countries whence laborers come in greater numbers than they could from Japan, and Japanese pride will not brook now a discrimination it submitted to in 1894.

The omission of that provision may raise a storm in California and thereabouts. The west coast senators may put forth their utmost endeavors to defeat the ratification of the treaty. They may tear passion to tatters in one wing of the capitol over the "yellow peril," while Representative Hobson is spending his time in the same intellectual recreation in the other. Yet it may be—it is to be hoped so, at least—that the proud Caucasians who have homes in California will be more reasonable and not so easily frightened by the specters of Japanese domination conjured up by their heated imaginations as on some past occasions.

That there should be a commercial treaty with Japan no one will deny. The trade relations of the two countries are so extensive as to make one imperative. The presumption is that the one now before the senate would be satisfactory to everybody were it not for the omission of the clause about the immigration of laborers. The treaty should be ratified, though it has not that clause and the west coast people should not protest.

They have seen Japanese immigration dwindle to a negligible quantity, and many of the immigrants of earlier years returning to their old homes. That has happened because the Japanese government has been loyal to its promise to keep its laborers at home. It is understood that the same policy will be adhered to after the new treaty shall have been ratified. There are reasons, quite irrespective of good faith and honor, for believing that it would be. Japan's interests lie that way.

If the promise were not kept and the Japs set out to swoop down on California like a swarm of locusts on a Kansas farm an exclusion law could be passed, whether the treaty did or did not refer to laborers. The pending treaty does not, but its ratification is none the less desirable.

MR. LORIMER'S FAIRY TALE.

Senator Lorimer's speech to the senate yesterday in his effort to sanctify his election reads like a modified version of Cinderella. It is a touching, modern political fairy tale, a narrative of magic goodness, of naughty villains, a bad giant or two, some friendly dwarfs, and generous elves. It all might have been possible in the old days when fairy godmothers with magic wands went about the earth rewarding virtue.

But we assume that United States senators are not eager children gathered about a fire at twilight listening to the wonderful adventures of a Prince Charming—the great perils he endured and the great joys that came to him.

Men with any knowledge of politics generally, or of the particular politicians discussed by Mr. Lorimer, will wonder that the junior senator from Illinois, presenting himself in his own defense, should have asked credence for the story he told of his election.

"My friends"—Hinky Dink Kenna, whose manipulations of elections in the First ward of Chicago are notorious and disgraceful; John Broderick, a hardened saloonkeeper and tough ward politician; Manny Abrahams, Henry A. Shephard, whose explanation of his presence in St. Louis under an assumed name, as made to the Cook county grand jury, made the jurymen gasp with indignation; Mike Link, whose neighbors told him he was unfit to think of renomination; Lee O'Neil Browne, John Griffin, small puppet of Kenna's disorderly, tribute levying First ward gang; Pete Galligan, Walter Lantz, these and other personages of this astounding defense—"my friends," friends of a man whose personal virtues are his cloak.

"My friends"—whom Mr. Lorimer would have the senate believe welcomed the opportunity to elect him United States senator for the cause of purity in politics and the promotion of good government; "my friends," by the confessed association with whom Mr. Lorimer has given full warrant for the attitude of decency in Chicago towards him.

There is not so much this time of Mr. Browne, the God fearing, upright man who believes in the Bible from cover to cover. His place in the defense is taken by Michael Kenna—Hinky Dink—endeared to Lorimer by years of association and acts of kindness; a friendship growing out of the days when both sold newspapers; "a friendship and gratitude that have lasted for over forty years."

And Kenna got a vote for his friend when Lorimer needed it to go to the senate. He got that of Griffin. "Bill," said Hink, "depend on me that Griffin will vote for you if no other member of the legislature does." Noble friend, Kenna. And Griffin told the senate's investigation committee that "no one" ever asked him to vote for Lorimer.

A patriotic and noble crew is this which the desperate Mr. Lorimer has endeavored to dignify and sanctify. In this state where he and they are known the defense betrays him.

Likewise do his evasions and distortions of political facts. His effort to give a false complexion to his activities in the legislature from the time the balloting for United States senator began, his pretense that his interests at Springfield were merely those of broad and constructive statesmanship, his attempt to make the senate believe that he was an innocent bystander and not a controlling factor in every maneuver beginning with the disorderly election of Shurtleff to the speakership by Democratic votes—these can deceive no informed person in Illinois.

Mr. Lorimer's first speech in the senate on this subject was a pitiful exhibition of weakness. His second, after the months which have been given that the facts might be made plain, only emphasizes the weakness of the first and of the Lorimer defense.

SILENCE.

Above the noise of mayoralty candidates enthusiastically reporting upon their campaign contributions, the silence of Mr. Graham sounds thunderous as Niagara on a clear night.

THE FIRE PERIL OF CHICAGO.

Doubtless the superintendent of inspections of the Chicago Underwriters' association could draft a building code superior in several respects to the one the council passed recently. If it were enforced—a proviso which never must be omitted—there would be a closer approach to fireproof construction and a notable reduction in the number of fires and the value of property destroyed. But when he tried to get his model ordinance through the council he would meet obstacles which it would be difficult if not impossible for him to overcome.

For instance, the superintendent would not permit frame buildings to be put up anywhere in the city. He perceives, as do many others, that a fire starting in a huddle of buildings of that kind just outside the fire limits might easily spread to buildings within the limits and inflict great damage. The frame buildings on the outskirts certainly are a potential danger, but the standing argument in favor of permitting their erection is that it would be a hardship on a poor man who owned a little lot to make him use brick instead of wood, and thus go to greater expense. If Edison would come here and start a plant for the making of his cheap cement houses the argument would be answered. Until it is we need not expect a sweeping extension of the fire limits or a prohibition of shingle roofs. The cement exposition now being held in Chicago will do a good deal of educating along desired lines for the solution of this evil.

It would be money saved if none but really fireproof buildings were allowed to be erected in the downtown district. The first cost would be greater, but the subsequent economies would more than cover the difference. We know, however, that many property owners would not be pleased with such a requirement and would use whatever influence they had with the aldermen to kill it. The council, it should be observed, always listens with more complacency to those who oppose rigid building and fire regulations than to those who advocate them.

There is one of the recommendations of the superintendent which the council ought to act on if it have the authority. That is the prohibition of the sale and use of parlor matches. That would inconvenience nobody. Even if it did inconvenience a few, the fact that more than one-sixth of the Chicago fires last year were due to the careless use of matches would be ample reason for the prohibition.

SQUABBLING OVER THE HARBOR

State Senators Juul and O'Connor have served notice upon the representatives of the city and sanitary district that unless they can agree upon the relations of these two bodies in the construction of an outer harbor for Chicago there will be no legislation on this project at the present session.

This is the old story. Officials who are sent to represent Chicago's interests to the legislature wrangle and divide, with the result to the city of nothing.

The community is sick of this sort of folly.

Do the city officials and sanitary district intend to keep faith with the public on this harbor question?

Our harbor needs are imperative and well understood. We have waited far too long for their relief. We want no more delay.

The city council has declared for a public harbor, municipally owned and publicly operated. A year ago the council committee on harbor, wharves, and bridges met with a committee of the drainage board and began to arrange terms for coöperation. It was assumed that the city was not in a financial position to proceed. It was assumed that the sanitary district could and would proceed if authorized. Now we find two bills before the assembly and two camps squabbling over terms. Most remarkable is the point at issue. The sanitary trustees ask that the sanitary district be given the absolute right to proceed after one year. Ald. Foell is quoted as proposing that five years be allowed the city, declaring that the city now has a larger amount of bonds available than the district.

Ald. Foell, if he was correctly reported, is in a peculiar position. He knows, or ought to know, that if the city has more bonds in the aggregate available, it has not more available for harbor construction. He also knows that the postponement of the beginning of harbor work during a term of five years will not be tolerated if the business community is at last awake to the vital interest of the community in this public improvement.

There is no reason why the city officials and the sanitary district should not come at once to terms. They represent the same interest, the same community. If they are in good faith concerned for that interest, if they propose to do their duty by the public harbor project, they will get together at once.

If they do not—and the greater responsibility is on the city officials—the community will accept no excuses.

Chicago must have an outer harbor without further quibbling and delay.

It Never Happened Before.

Wandering aimlessly over the campus, a blonde giant chanced to meet a living skeleton.

"Who are you?" demanded the living skeleton, wrinkling his brows; "where have I seen you before?"

"Ay ban Ole Skjarsen," said the blonde giant.

"Why, of course! Don't you know me, you big stiff? I'm the Tennessee Shad!"

They shook hands.

Forth from their hiding places rushed George Fitch and Owen Johnson.

"Hi, there!" they bellowed. "Break away! First thing you know there'll be a mixup between Siwash and Lawrenceville!"

Each dragged his respective hero from the field, thereby preventing, just in the nick of time, what probably would have been the most hopeless literary entanglement in the whole realm of magazine fiction.

MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1911: By the Brentwood Company.]

AMONG the peculiar features of the recent royal libel case in London is the fact that the prisoner, Myllus, has never, to this day, met personally his American employer, Edward Holton James, who now occupies two apartments in the Rue St. Dominique, in Paris, and who was for six months city editor of a Milwaukee newspaper. It seems that when, two years ago, James interested himself in behalf of some Indian agitators, who were being prosecuted in London for sedition, he was referred by one of them to Myllus as likely to become a useful agent for him in England, and as a man with advanced ideas regarding republican forms of government. A correspondence ensued, and Myllus became James' agent in London for the promotion of republican ideas; but everything between them was done in writing, and they have never seen one another.

Up to the time of his employment by James, two years ago, Myllus was engaged in minor clerical work in a mercantile house in the city at the meager salary of $500 a year. He abandoned this when James offered him three times the amount to look after his propaganda in London, and, above all, to hunt data for him in the great national library in the British museum.

In spite of his odd name, Myllus is an Englishman, has had a grammar school education, and considerably younger than the years attributed to him by the court and by the press, is a man of undigested, disordered instruction, of warped judgment, and of misdirected enthusiasm.

The sentence of twelve months' imprisonment passed upon Myllus is a light one, all things considered, for it is not accompanied by hard labor, and will be spent not in any penitentiary, but in Holloway jail, along with the judgment debtors and militant suffragets. Holloway jail is the counterpart in London of Ludlow street jail in New York.

It is a great mistake to imagine that, if King George yields to the demands of the cabinet, and creates a sufficient number of peers to give the administration the legislative majority in the house of lords, either he or the premier will go out into the highways to offer peerages to any one for the asking. The stories printed on both sides of the Atlantic to the effect that the Liberal whips are going about among the rich men of their party with notebooks, making a list of those who are willing to accept coronets, and of the amount which they are willing to pay for them, in the shape of subscriptions to the campaign funds of the Liberal party, are without foundation.

What King George and the premier have determined to do in the event of a wholesale creation of peers becoming necessary for legislative purposes is to bestow baronies on the eldest sons of Liberal peers; in a word, to call them to the upper house during the lifetime of their fathers instead of waiting for the death of the latter. In this way the Liberal voting force of the house of lords would be largely increased without actually augmenting the peerage, since all the new honors would be merged into the older ones on the succession of the new barons to their fathers' honors.

This is the plan William IV. proposed to the Whig ministers in May, 1832, when they sought from him the creation of a sufficient number of Whig peers to force the reform bill through the house of lords. King William made one condition—namely: that the eldest sons of all Whig peers should be called to the house of lords by their fathers' minor titles before any other Whig peers were created. In those days there were thirty-nine heirs of Whig peers available for the purpose, and the number needed to secure the passage of the reform bill through the lords was forty. This necessitated the creation of only two peers from outside of the peerage. In the present instance the proportion would be larger.

Among the sons of Liberal peers who could thus be called to the upper house this year are Lord Ribblesdale's son, the Hon. Charles Lister, nephew of Premier and Mrs. Asquith, and who recently deserted the Socialist camp to enter the diplomatic service as an attaché. He relinquished his former Socialist friends and associates because in public prints and in speeches they had gone out of their way to assail various members of his family in a particularly vigorous fashion. I understand that his first post is to be at Washington, where he will be under the guidance and command of Ambassador Bryce.

Then there is Lord Wodehouse, who is the eldest son and heir of the Earl of Kimberley. The Earl Russell's brother and heir, the Hon. Bertrand Russell, married to an American woman, the daughter of Robert Pearsall Smith of Philadelphia, is an enthusiastic Liberal, and would constitute a valuable addition to the government forces in the house of lords. And so, too, would the Marquis of Northampton's eldest son, who bears the courtesy title of Earl Compton, and who is an officer of the household cavalry.

There is also the eldest son and heir of Lord Joicey, and the son of Lord Furness. In fact, there is a long list of adult sons of Liberal peers, who will be summoned to the house of lords, either by virtue of one of their fathers' minor honors or else by means of brand new baronies, before any other additions will be made to the upper house of the national legislature.

Count Patrick O'Brien de Lassy was condemned to penal servitude for life at St. Petersburg last week instead of being sentenced to death, for having brought about the murder of his wife's brother, Count Vassili Bouturlin, because capital punishment in ordinary criminal cases has been abolished in Russia ever since the reign of Catherine the Great.

While it does not exist in civil procedure, it is retained for military and naval offenses, and the Muscovite authorities are enabled to send nihilists to the scaffold, because political offenders, particularly those who have been concerned in nihilist outrages, are tried not by the ordinary tribunals, but by courts martial, as being beyond the pale of the law.

When Vera Sassoulitch was tried by the ordinary courts for shooting and dangerously wounding Gen. Trepoff, prefect of the police of St. Petersburg, her trial resulted in an acquittal, and the Russian government, finding itself powerless to deal with nihilist outrages by means of criminal courts, then and there arranged that not only all disturbed districts should be subjected to military law, but that political offenses, especially those of a nihilist nature, should be dealt with by courts martial.

It is in this fashion that so many assassins and would be assassins of members of the imperial family, of statesmen, of high dignitaries of the realm, and of officials of one kind and another have been sent to the gallows.

MANY NAMES IN ONE FAMILY.

Harry Krebs was here the last week from Walnut, Ill., the guest of his brother, Earl Stafford. That sounds a trifle peculiar that a young man with one surname should visit his brother with another surname. We quizzed the boys on this point. They replied that there were five children in their family. Their mother died when they were young and they were adopted by different families over the country, and each of them has a surname differing from those of all the rest. C. C. Chandler lives at Oklahoma City, William Malin lives at Little Sandusky, O., and the sister, Mrs. Zula Dod, lives at Walnut, Ill.—Marysville Herald.

An Exclusive Affair.

On Friday evening the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bruce was a scene of great beauty. The gorgeously gowned ladies and their attendants, in the conventional black, assembled at the request of their host and hostess at dancing. The ballroom, the only one of its kind in the state, outside the large cities, was in pink with its profusion of lights, subdued with palms and ferns. The cut flowers were La France roses and carnations. The orchestra, on the balcony, was concealed by a bank of palms and ferns, and rendered excellent music. At midnight the host asked all to the dining room, where delicious refreshments were served, consisting of olives, sandwiches, chicken salad, ice cream and cakes. During the intermissions selections were exquisitely rendered by Mesdames Jummonville, Ferris, and Hogan, and Miss Camp. After the serving of the guests, all returned to the ballroom and resumed dancing. Upon leaving, each guest was loud in their praises and voted Mr. and Mrs. Bruce entertainers of rare ability. Practically all of the society set of Hammond were present, consisting of about fifty couples.—Hammond (Ia.) Herald.

"THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE."

PAINTING THE LOOP STRUCTURE.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Just before the Knights Templar were here last summer you published an article telling how Chicago was being put in gala dress for the benefit of the visitors. You said that the city was going to compel the painting of the loop, but "in order that there may be as little confusion as possible in the downtown streets the work of painting the structure will not be started until the conclave is over," or words to that effect. Doesn't the franchise held by the companies who use the loop provide for the painting of the platforms, steps, etc.? I believe you said the city could not compel the painting of the stations. If we must have the loop, it would surely present a better appearance if painted. Why not the gray which is being used on the temporary supports? As it is, it is an unsightly object. G. T.

The structure commonly known as the "union loop" was erected and is being maintained under and by virtue of authority granted in four certain ordinances to the Lake Street Elevated railroad company, Northwestern Elevated railroad company, Union Elevated railroad company, and Union Consolidated Elevated railway company. All of said ordinances contain specific provisions with reference to painting, which, in the case of the Lake Street Elevated railroad company, read as follows:

"All of said supporting columns, cross-girders, longitudinal girders, platform connections, and landings shall be thoroughly and neatly painted, and this general condition and sightly appearance shall be maintained at all times."

The language of the other three ordinances, although somewhat different, is substantially the same in substance. The words "platform connections," above quoted, cannot be construed as including the station proper, but merely the means of ingress to or egress from the platform.

DAMAGES FOR LAWN TRESPASS.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly tell me what jurisdiction a lot owner has over the parking, or lawn, surrounding his property? I have inquired of police authorities, but their views are so varied and uncertain that their opinion is valueless. I have gone to much expense and spent a good deal of time in making a lawn about my home, one that neighbors say has added materially to the attractiveness of our district. People persist in cutting across the lawn, and some tramp the length of it rather than use the cement walk. Alleged baseball players are the greatest offenders, and to save the spikes in their shoes stalk over the lawn, tearing up pieces of sod with every step. It does seem to me there should be some effective protection against such malicious destruction. J. K. F.

No city ordinance covers this subject. The Supreme court of this state has held in several cases that, "while a property owner has no claim to, or control over, the trees or lawn in a street in front of his premises, as against the municipality, yet as against third persons negligently injuring or destroying them he may recover damages." In order to prevent a further destruction of this lawn it will be necessary for J. K. F. either to place a suitable protection around it or to bring suit for damages against such persons as injure the same.

FILING CORPORATE STATEMENTS.

[To the Friend of the People.]—I am a stockholder of record in a manufacturing corporation with a million dollars paid up capital, and operating under a New Jersey charter in another state. I have written to the treasurer of the company asking for a statement showing the financial condition of the company, but he has ignored my request. I wish to ascertain if they have filed at Washington a statement under the new law, before going there to get a copy. To whom shall I write for this information?

STOCKHOLDER.

The statement of a New Jersey corporation would be filed with the collector of internal revenue for New Jersey.

SIXTIETH AVENUE THE PRESENT TERMINUS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will the Chicago Railways company build a car barn at Sixtieth avenue and West Madison street? Also, what do you know about the same cars running through Oak Park? F. A. G.

As the Chicago Railways company has a large car station at Fortieth avenue and Madison street, no car station will be erected at Sixtieth avenue. The company's cars now stop at Sixtieth avenue, which is as far as they have any right to go under the ordinance granted by the city.

THEATER PRICES; STAGE CHILDREN.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly ask the management to explain why the price for the best seats during the Sothern-Marlowe engagement in Chicago is 33 1-3 per cent higher than those prevailing in New York? In the latter city $1.50 was the highest price asked; here it is $2.

Also, why is it not possible for the New theater production of "The Blue Bird" to be given here at matinées? As I understand it, the factory law applies only to children employed in the theater after 7 p. m. M.

It is said that in New York Shakspeare is no longer popular. Therefore his plays were offered at $1.50 the seat. Here and elsewhere in "the provinces" he is still esteemed enough to justify a demand for $2. There is nothing to prevent the use of children on the stage at matinées.

ILLITERACY OF TAX EATERS.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Apropos of tax notices I receive each year from the county collector or county treasurer, I am struck by the obvious illiteracy of the clerks who make out and mail these notices. Not once has my name been spelled correctly and the writing generally is so illegible that it is a marvel that the letters are delivered at all. Which reminds me of a story:

A friend of mine some years ago went to pay his taxes. It was the last day. There was a long line of individuals anxious to settle, and it looked as if my friend would be at least two hours reaching the wicket. Looking over the railing, he observed a political ward worker from his precinct seated at a desk and apparently deeply engaged in a job of intricate bookkeeping.

My friend called: "Hey, Tom!"

Tom looked up and came to the railing.

Said my friend to him: "Tom, I am in an awful hurry. Here is the amount of my taxes. I don't want to have to wait two hours in line. I wish you would take it in and write me a receipt for it."

Tom looked around, beckoned to my friend to bend his head closer to the railing, and said:

"I'd be happy to do it for you, Mr. Jones, but you know I can't read nor write."

My friend was amazed but hardly astonished. He took occasion to investigate the educational qualifications of the tax eater and found out that he had told the truth.

Of course, some of them can read and some of them can write, else no work would be done. But the gentlemen who send out the notices of assessment to taxpayers certainly cannot write very well, and from the mistakes they make in addressing, apparently their reading is not much better than their writing.

THE BACHELOR'S BABY.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Feb. 16.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Since the inauguration of your column I have been deeply interested in the varied and valuable information that is possible of being gleaned on subjects of popular interest. Indeed, THE TRIBUNE has become a matter of necessity, and while away from Chicago I secure it whenever possible. The principal object of this letter, however, is, to take issue with H. S. G., not because of his apparent desire for information, as evidenced in his letter dated Feb. 7, regarding child labor regulations, but because of his having referred to the matter at all.

"The Bachelor's Baby" is a production that, while highly entertaining, has a moral which should be far reaching in effect. The manner in which the story unfolds itself reveals clearly the emotions with which the average bachelor would have to contend under similar conditions. With the same masterly regard for the truisms of life is also depicts the inherent selfishness of man generally. Underlying the general scheme of the play one may readily recognize the keynote, "And a little child shall lead them." The "Baby" is the center of attraction—is, in fact, a co-star with Francis Wilson.

When in Detroit a short time ago I met the "Baby," who is a boy, in my hotel, and a healthier specimen of American boyhood would be hard to find. In course of conversation I learned that he has the constant protection and guidance of his mother and is not being neglected in the matter of education.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

APPONYI'S UNFORTUNATE COMPARISON.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The result of Count Apponyi's visit is poor. Every impartial observer feels that only his countship saves his speeches, which are replete with commonplaces and bring no new original views in the peace movement. His lecture in the Twentieth Century club surprises only by the deluge of compliments, but even the average student of international questions was thoroughly disappointed.

Everybody must be disgusted at the insisting of Apponyi upon the impossible comparison between Hungary and the United States. Hungary and Austria, this polyglot double monarchy, can be compared only with Switzerland, where no hegemony of one nation exists, the German, Italian, and French languages having absolutely equal rights. The United States is a voluntary melting pot, but in Europe every nation has a sacred right to preserve its individuality. The Slavs were in Hungary many hundred years before the coming of the Magyars, who have neither historical nor numerical right for their hegemony, the population in Hungary being, even according to the inflated governmental census of 1900, only 45 per cent Magyars and 55 per cent non-Magyars. The Apponyis were always reactionary. George Apponyi, the father of Count Apponyi, was the greatest opponent of Kossuth's revolutionary party, and his stubbornness, when he became great chancellor Oct. 31, 1847, hastened the Magyar revolution. What an irony! The United States, which gave such an enthusiastic reception to Kossuth, now entertains the faithful son of Kossuth's enemy!

THE VOTER'S DILEMMA.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What are the obligations of the voter to the primary election?

He may do one of four things. 1. He may not vote in the primary, leave his party to select whom it will, and be one of the independent voters to choose among the parties. Evidently, only a few can take this course, or parties will become utterly corrupt. 2. He may vote in the primary and vote for the nominee regardless of his opinion of the fitness of the candidate. Like Launcelot:

"His honor rooted in dishonor stood
And faith unfaithful made him falsely true."

This places party above country, the means above the end, the semblance of honor against the substance at which it aims.

3. He may vote in the primary and in the event of the nomination of the less fit man he may not vote in the final election. But as the transference of vote from one to another side counts two votes, so the failure of a citizen to vote counts one. Not voting is simply a half measure, and principle does not palliate such makeshifts.

4. He may vote honestly in the primary, and in the event his party names an unworthy man vote for the best candidate in the final election. Has he a right to assist his party to name the best man without being bound to support the worst man if named by his party? By what other right than such implied agreement to conform does a voter participate in a primary?

It seems to me the voter is in the old dilemma—"he can't if he can, he will if he won't; he'll be damned if he does, he'll be damned if he don't."

Local custom and opinion are valuable in such ethics; what is the custom and public opinion in Chicago on this question?

PEACE UNCERTAIN, IRELAND ASSERTS

Archbishop Takes Opposite View from That of Carnegie and Others.

PRAISE FOR THE SOLDIER

America Respected by Nations Because Feared; Barrett Urges Canal Toll Bill.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Archbishop Ireland, speaking before the Creve Coeur club of Peoria on the anniversary of Washington's birthday, held in distinct terms that the period of international peace has not yet arrived. He took opposite views from those of Andrew Carnegie and the forces which have been working toward universal peace. John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American republics, announced the course he proposes recommending at Washington, particularly as regards the Panama canal.

"Has the day come," said Archbishop Ireland, "of such eminent prepotency of the principle of arbitration that a great nation such as the United States of America may safely turn all its swords into plowshares and all its spears into sickles? No one will make the affirmation.

America Respected Because Feared.

"No, the day of assured and lasting international peace has not arrived, if ever ambitions and pride of nations permit it to arrive. Today the nation that dismantles its ships of war and disbands its soldiers puts itself in danger of gross humiliation, if not fatal disaster. Today America is respected by its sister nations—it is respected because, also, it is feared.

"Its shores are safe from invaders because it will be prompt to repel them; its mandates are hearkened to, because its warships are ready to follow in their wake. And the more the fear of America travels far and wide the more certain it is that its honor shall remain unsullied, its territory intact, its commerce free and prosperous. Peace America invokes, but to be the more sure of peace America must be ready at a moment's notice to summon to its defense an army and a navy to whom defeat is impossible.

"The shedding of human blood is terrible, but other things are still more terrible—the destruction of social security, the disruption of the nation, its enslavement to foreign power, the robbery of its territory, the possible lowering through disgrace, abetted by cowardice, of the starry flag from today's triumphant flight across oceans and continents. Human life is precious, but it must be taken if it stands in the way of the supreme right of a people.

Soldier Needed to Defend Country.

"Human life is precious, but it must pour out in glad oblation when country calls; it is precious, but its highest value is its power of self sacrifice on behalf of great and meaningful causes.

"The country is in peril unless the soldier is near by to defend it. Honor, then, to the soldier.

"How thrill our hearts as the flag of America rises in the air, spreading over us its protecting folds, bidding us to be without fear or alarm in our most sacred interests, bidding us have exultant pride in our glories, the glories of our American citizenship.

"The soldier, like the flag, is the emblem of the nation, of its sovereignty, and of its glory; his uniform is the counterpart of the flag. Without the soldier the flag is silent when insults are hurled against it, helpless when an enemy fells it to the ground. The soldier is the sworn defender of the nation, its will is his supreme law, its safety his supreme purpose.

"We work in peace, we enjoy in peace our pleasures, we slumber in peace because the soldier is on guard. Honor to the soldier for the sacrifice he makes. It is not the sacrifice of time or fortune, of position or fame, it is that of life."

Barrett Pleads for Toll Bill.

"Let us pause here for a moment and express the prayerful hope that the United States senate," said Barrett, "as logically and forcibly urged by that remarkable engineer and genius, Col. Goethals, will pass the bill which regulates the tolls to be charged upon vessels using the canal. Unless this measure passes congress at this session great harm will be done to the commerce of the canal, for shipping companies must commence without delay to make preparations for the canal, and they dare not take these necessary steps until they know what charges on tonnage they must meet. Friends of the Panama canal and pan-American commerce regard this measure as not even second to the reciprocity bill in its effect on our foreign trade."

DETECTIVES THINK THEY HAVE REAL DOROTHY ARNOLD CLEW.

Declare Communication Has Been Established with Missing Heiress Through Postoffice at Richmond, Va.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The first real clew which may reveal the hiding place of Dorothy Arnold was discovered tonight. Through telegrams sent by George S. Grisom Jr. from the Hotel Chalfonte at Atlantic City to the postoffice in Richmond, Va., it was discovered that communication had been established with Miss Arnold through Mrs. A. J. Bradley, who had rented postoffice box No. 621 there for receiving messages. Detectives are following the trail of the telegrams.

Mr. Grisom also received a letter yesterday in an envelope of the North German Lloyd steamship company, indicating that it was mailed on the arrival of the steamship Bremen last Monday.

"Miss Arnold will return home as soon as her parents reach an agreement," it was said tonight by a person close to the family. "A family misunderstanding is responsible for all the publicity in the case."

THINKS HE WENT TO HEAVEN WHILE INFLUENCED BY ETHER.

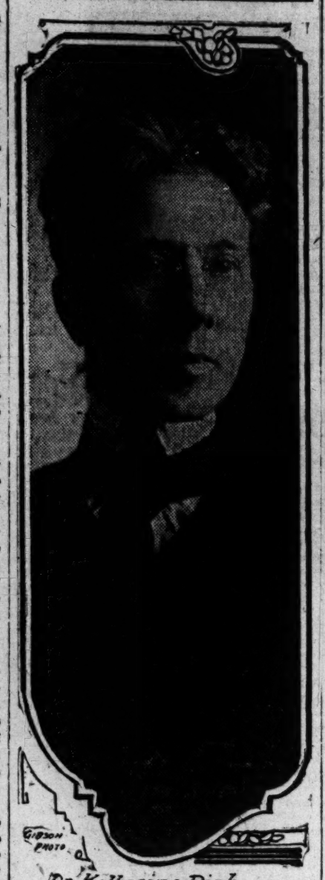

Pennsylvania Pastor Who Underwent Operation Disappointed on Recovering from Effects of Anaesthetic.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Rev. William E. A. Blackstone, pastor of the Bustola Methodist Episcopal church, believes he took "a trip to heaven" while under the influence of ether for an operation in the Jefferson hospital.

In describing the trip today, Dr. Blackstone said he recognized many of his former parishioners, who had died within the last ten years. He said heaven appeared to be one lovely garden, where joy and bliss reigned supreme.

He said he was disappointed upon coming from the effects of the ether, to discover that he still was on earth and had to take up the earthly burdens.

Woman Favored as City Physician.

Dr. Katherine Rich

It was unofficially stated at the city hall yesterday that Dr. Katherine Brainerd Rich, secretary and treasurer of the Medical Woman's league of Chicago, probably would fill the new office of assistant city physician recently created by the budget. The position is to be filled by a woman.

Dr. Rich was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1901, and since then has had charge of the medical department at Gad's Hill settlement. It was here that she founded the first night clinic in Chicago.

In order to be near her work, Dr. Rich lives in an apartment above the dispensary, at 1057 West Twentieth street. Her downtown office is in the Stewart building.

WOMEN BY VOTE IN SEATTLE WORK A SECOND REVOLUTION.

Defeat All but Three of Councilmanic Candidates Identified with Gill, Recently Recalled by Feminine Ballots

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 22.—For the second time in a month the votes of women have worked a revolution in Seattle.

In yesterday's primary election to choose eighteen candidates for councilmen to be voted on March 7, the women voters followed up their vote of Feb. 7 which ousted Mayor Hiram C. Gill and his appointive officers by defeating all but three candidates who were accused of being on intimate terms with the late Gill administration.

These three were nominated yesterday by so narrow a margin that it is almost certain they will not be among the nine selected as councilmen in March.

Demand and Oppose Suffrage.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The senate and assembly committee on judiciary today heard arguments by delegations of women both for and against equal suffrage. There were a number of delegates from the Equal Franchise society present and also several women who oppose the right of suffrage.

Miss Harriet May Mills, president of the State Suffrage association, marshaled the speakers for the bill, who included Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, and Max Eastman.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge was in charge of the forces of the opposition, who included Mrs. John Martin of Staten Island, Miss Margaret Doane Gardiner of Albany, and Miss Alice Hill Chittenden.

GIVES CUE TO YOUNG LAWYERS.

Attorney General Wickersham Says Many Practitioners Make Fetish of Procedure.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Modern American lawyers have made a fetish of procedure and have created a mass of artificial rules which in some states presents as great an obstacle to reaching the judgment seat as did the common law rules of pleading before the English judicature reform acts. Attorney General Wickersham made this startling statement to an audience attendant upon the dedication of the new law department building of the Georgetown university here tonight. He declared it to be the privilege of young men now entering the profession to contribute in the work of clearing away this mass of worse than useless machinery and of substituting a few simple regulations.

How to Reduce Fat Without Drugs, Diet or Exercise

After the summer is past and there are no more hot, stuffy days, this is the time when fat people should be thinking about reducing their weight and should stop making the fat that is such a burden to them. The best way and the easiest way is the one about which so much has been said and written this past year. This way is the Marmola way. The famous Marmola Prescription has been prepared in tablet form. These little tablets contain nothing but the elements that go to change the things which produce fat into good, strong blood, nerves, tissues and bone. More than this, these tablets absorb and remove the fat remaining at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces per day. You must not confuse Marmola Tablets with harmful patent drugs and hurtful reducing methods. These tablets go into your stomach just like the food you eat. They build up the juices of the digestive organs and correct these juices so that they produce no more fat. They are harmless, yet thousands of men and women all over this land today are of firm figures and normal size because of these little tablets. This is why every druggist everywhere carries them in stock and will sell them to you. If your druggist does not have them, or you would rather send 75 cts., the price of a case, to The Marmola Co., 1409 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., they will send them to you at once in a plain package, postage paid.

TRIBUTE BY TAFT TO WASHINGTON

President Speaks at Alexandria, Va., to Masons of Country Assembled There.

PLACE WREATH ON TOMB.

Details of Organization for Memorial to Father of Country Completed.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 22.—President Taft paid tribute today to George Washington by attending the meeting here of the George Washington Masonic Memorial association. Later he delivered an address at the banquet given by the local lodge of Masons, of which the first president of the United States was the most distinguished member.

Representative Masons from all parts of the country took part in the ceremonies. The president, a member of a Cincinnati lodge, witnessed the conferring of the master's degree upon William H. Pettus by Grand Master Swift of Michigan.

Reciprocity received a mention from the president. He had been informed, he said, that in one of the delegations attending the meeting 113 had been counted in favor of Canadian reciprocity, while only five had hesitated. Coming from Buffalo, where some opposition might be looked for, the president declared he was not going to quarrel with such a unanimity.

Complete Memorial Details.

The Masons placed upon the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon a wreath of flowers. They afterward completed details of the organization to erect in this city a Masonic memorial to Washington in the form of a temple.

Officers elected today are:

President—Thomas J. Shryock, grand master of Maryland.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE WARNS AS TO SPECIAL EDUCATION.

Says Dangers Lurk in Modern Tendency to Specialize, as Such Training Has Effect of Narrowing the Mind.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 22.—The dangers that lurk in the modern tendency toward specialization in education were pointed out to the students of Johns Hopkins university today by James Bryce, ambassador from Great Britain to the United States.

Mr. Bryce was among the speakers at the university's annual celebration of commemoration day. He declared that specialization was inevitable because of the far reaching nature of modern scientific investigations, but warned his hearers that narrowness of view might result from too close application to a special branch of study.

Mr. Bryce was given the honorary degree of doctor of laws by the university.

Miss McClure Engaged; Wide Circle Interested.

A WIDE circle of Chicagoans will find much interest in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Annie McClure, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. G. K. McClure and Dumont Clarke, of Dumont, N. J. Miss McClure has not taken the generally active part in society that her younger sister, Miss Harriet McClure, has taken, but she is widely known. She has been a close companion of her father, has served as his secretary and otherwise been interested in the work that would fall to the clergyman of a large parish and in more recent years to the president of the McCormick Theological seminary. The home department will give $100 to furnish the mothers' room in memory of Mrs. Lucy Furness. Mrs. Furness was a charter member of the Chicago Woman's club and helped to organize the home department. Nominations in the various departments were made as follows: Mrs. Alice Bradford Wiles, chairman of the philanthropy and science department; Mrs. Sarah F. Gane and Miss Esther Witkowsky, directors; Mrs. J. C. Bleye was nominated for reelection as chairman of the home department; Mrs. Walter B. Hoag and Mrs. William Welch, directors; Mrs. Howard Kretschmar declined reelection to the chairmanship of the art and literature department and Mrs. Edwin T. Johnson was nominated; Mrs. Charles G. Comstock and Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley were selected for directors. In the philanthropy department, Mrs. John B. Sherwood was nominated for reelection to the chairmanship. Mrs. Eugene S. Talbot and Mrs. Samuel Dauchy were nominated for directors.

They will wear Italian peasant costume and will distribute attractive souvenir programs.

Mrs. Franklin E. Nellis spoke at the morning session of the philanthropy department on "The Adult Blind."

"In Illinois there are 5,500 adult blind," said Mrs. Nellis. "Their blindness is caused by arduous work in factories and under bright lights in business offices. The increased number of adults who are going blind in Chicago and throughout the state demands that the state take action to insure the proper care of these people."

At the afternoon meeting of the club the movement to close the postoffice on Sunday was indorsed, as was a bill for imposing a capital tax on the manufacture of white sulphur matches.

The bill for regulating and limiting the working hours of women to fifty-four hours a week was brought up for discussion, and was indorsed by the members.

Bathing beaches will come under the supervision of the club in the near future, and provision for separate dressing rooms for women and children will be discussed.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk spoke in the afternoon before the No Vote, No Tax league meeting held in the Masonic temple. She argued against the commissioners' recommendation on the tax question.

"The commissioners appointed by Gov. Deneen dodged the issue and have not offered us any solution," she said. "The most vicious feature of the recommendation is that it gives the governor the power of controlling the taxing board."

Mrs. Funk left at night for Springfield, where she will speak today before the legislative judiciary committee on the wife and child abandonment bill. The bill provides that a man who abandons his family may be sent to the workhouse and while there may earn wages which will go to support his family and keep them from want.

Friend of Lord Decies Seeks Wife.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Lord Camoys, who came from England to be an usher at the wedding of Vivien Gould to Lord Decies, has told several friends he would "extremely well like to remain on this side of the Atlantic, marry, perhaps, and engage in some form of business enterprise, both interesting and profitable."

"In fact," volunteered an English associate of his lordship tonight, "Lord Camoys has said the American girls appeal to him extremely. When chaffed about the favor with which he looks upon unions of American girls with titled foreigners, he merely implies that such a match wouldn't be against his liking.

"Since he arrived in America ambitious mothers have showered invitations on him. He has said several times that he wants a wife, and the bidding, if such it may be termed, is growing more lively as the days pass.

"Unless I am much mistaken, the newspapers before long will announce the engagement of Lord Camoys to some socially prominent and extremely wealthy young woman."

Round About Chicago.

Our Window Box Garden.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

SPRING soon will be here. Out at Mont Clare people with strong telescopes are sitting on the house tops through the long hours of the day and the dark cold watches of the night waiting for the first robin. As soon as the robin arrives spring will be here, and all people should be ready to put in their crops of geraniums, onions, dandelions, and all the other plants that make flat life so attractive.

If you have not tried, you have no idea how plant life adds to the beauty and comfort of flat dwellers. Last year we began the experiment for the first time. Our neighbors all around us said we would not succeed, and Mrs. Boodle, who lived below us, made decided objections regarding us to the agent because our window box of begonias dropped down on her imported Pomeranian dog, "Toozie Ootzie." As a Pomeranian Toozie Ootzie was of no further use, but as a hearth rug or a door mat he would have been neat and pretty. The dandelion seeds in the second of our three boxes kept blowing across the court into Mrs. Timpkins' dining room. We always were going over to Mrs. Timpkins and thanking her if she would please give us back our dandelion seeds. Mrs. Timpkins did not love pretty flowers, and acted rudely about the matter. She said that she did not see any dandelion seeds on her new dining room rug, but that we were welcome to come in, and, if any part of that two ton and a half of dirt that the wind had blown into her nice clean flat out of our dirty window box was dandelion seed, we were perfectly free to scoop it up and take it down to the alley where it belonged. What a horrid disposition that woman had. But in spite of our neighbors we persevered to contribute our little share towards making the city more beautiful.

The plants in the three window boxes did not come up as quickly as we expected, and yet our experience with our little garden proved conclusively that plant life not only is beautiful, but useful to flat dwellers. We had been laughed at severely by some neighbors for planting summer squash in the third window box, but the summer squash proved the most delightful plant of all. We wished earnestly one morning about 2 o'clock, or perhaps nearer 3, to do something towards disbanding a massmeeting of all the cats in the block which was being held in the courtyard of our flat building.

We did not wish to throw the begonia seeds away because begonias are such showy flowers, and, besides, Mrs. Boodle had bought another toy Pomeranian. And dandelions, too, are so pretty and we had worked so hard with the seeds since the last time we recovered them from Mrs. Timpkins' dining room. We had taken each cute little seed and pasted it with cement glue to the bottom of the box. We knew the flowers when they blossomed would be as firm and hard as though chiseled from granite.

We had a dear friend who always was grabbing up every flower she came across and rubbing her nose in it. We thought with delight of what a shock she would receive when she tried to sniff our cement dandelions. So we did not wish to throw the dandelions at the cat reunion.

Then we thought of the summer squash in the third box. Just the thing. When the squash grew up the vines would be sure to run all over the bedroom and we'd be tripping over them all the time. And think of big summer squash dropping down from the ceiling. And we would have to eat summer squash pie until we would be heartily sick of it.

So we decided to throw the summer squash box at the cats. It was a great success. The box must have hit at least twenty cats at once, and the noise brought all the neighbors to the courtyard to find if any pieces had been left of the janitor when the boiler exploded.

Quite pleased at the first proof of how delightful a thing a window garden can be in a flat, we took no interest in the assembling of our neighbors in nighties in the areaway.

The dandelions did not grow to suit us, and we were sorry for a while that we had not planted oranges or bananas. It would be so nice every morning before breakfast to go to one's own window ledge and pluck a great golden orange or a luscious mellow banana right off the vine. Something seemed to be wrong with our cement dandelions, although what we never could discover.

It certainly was through no fault in our gardening, because we used to dump the dirt in the dandelion box out on the floor every evening and examine the seeds cemented in the bottom of the box with great care. We finally quite despaired of the dandelions ever growing, but just when we had lost all hope our parrot died.

We did not know at first what to do with the remains, until finally we thought of giving them proper burial in the dandelion window box. So this we did, burying the late lamented parrot deep in its window ledge grave. Not long after this Mary Garden, our yellow kitten, died of a complication of bronchitis and fleas, and we buried her in the same cute little grave in the dandelion box.

Soon afterwards our neighbors frequently would ask us what we were growing in our window box garden. When we would say nasturtiums, they would insist that we were wrong and that we had planted skunk cabbage by mistake. We did not mind it ourselves at all, as we always kept that window shut down tight. It was amusing to us to see the carpenters tearing up floors all through the building, and the plumbers overhauling thousands of feet of lead pipe. But after awhile the trail of suspicion led so close to our window box that to avoid unpleasant comment we carried it in the dead of night down to the lake and buried it in the lonesome waste of sand.

Our third window box, which contained the begonias we were saving for Mrs. Boodle's new Pomeranian, never was used for that purpose. We read in a magazine that begonias should have plenty of room and lots of water, and we decided that the window box was too small to give the little begonias a chance to begone. So we took in the box, poured the dirt into the bath tub and turned on the water. Mrs. Boodle acted unreasonable about the matter the next morning. She insisted that the water which had poured down from our bathroom was standing over four feet deep in her flat, and she demanded that we should tell her what she should do. We replied that if the water really was four feet deep she should get some canoes and a half dozen bathing suits and a nice life guard and start a bathing beach. But she insisted upon acting uppish, and so we decided to move out of the building.

And the strange part of it was that even with all the water we gave them the begonias had not begoned a bit during the night. But inasmuch as we were moving out anyhow it made no particular difference, and besides we had lost interest in begonias, and had quite made up our mind that in the window boxes which we intended to have in our new flat we would plant a deadly Upas tree or poison ivy, so that, if the neighbors there acted as disagreeable about pretty flowers as they had been at our old flat, we would just stick the deadly Upas tree or the poison ivy on them.

Music and the Drama.

"Secret Service" is Still A Dependable Thriller.

"SECRET SERVICE."
A Play by William Gillette.
Presented at the Illinois Theater, Chicago, Beginning Feb. 20, 1911, by WILLIAM GILLETTE
and His Company. The Cast:

Gen. Nelson Randolph	William Riley Hatch
Mrs. Gen. Varney	Marie Wainwright
Edith Varney	Louise Rutter
Wilfred Varney	Albert Parker
Caroline Mitford	Josephine Brown
Lewis Dumont	William Gillette
Henry Dumont	Clifford Bruce
Benton Arrelsford	John Miltern
Martha	Marion Abbott
Jonas	Charles H. Bradshaw
Lieut. Foray	A. Romaine Callender

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

AT the end of the third act of "Secret Service" the hero, as all playgoers know, betrays his country for the sentimental reason that the heroine likewise turns traitor to hers. According to the conventional rules of earthly conduct this deviation from the strict line of patriotic duty should be abhorred, and both culprits ought, in the next act, to be severely penalized. But so broad and compassionate is the human outlook upon matters of the kind that when Mr. Gillette's admirable ingenuity contrives a moderately happy terminal for the episode, every one is gratified, and so the play, for that and other excuses, becomes a worthy fixture of American melodrama.

For while the treason they despise,
The traitor still they love.

It is possible to imagine Mr. Gillette reading "Secret Service" to his critical friends years ago, before it was produced. Probably he was not addicted to that habit, but in case he was one can hear them object something in this fashion: "It will never do, William, because that scathing monosyllable 'spy' describes nothing beloved by the playgoer. No matter how heroic he is, it is the world's 'dirty work' that he does, and naught can purge the stain it leaves on character. It is a part of his courage to be base, and of his devotion to be treacherous. And when at the crisis he weakens and, betrays his government as he has been betraying its enemies, it is asking your public to pay for something they will not buy. If you insist upon writing about a spy, write about him for the 'high brows.' Let him be immovably faithful to the Star Spangled Banner, confess his character to his southern sweetheart, and then expiate his adventurous and patriotic propensities at the end of a rope. Since your play cannot be popular, make it, at least, artistic."

Of course, these critics, if they existed, did not reckon with that potent combination of felicitous phrase and personality with which Mr. Gillette utilizes in the presentation of "Secret Service." They did not see Mr. Gillette's pathetic spy, wounded and hunted, climbing through the jasmine on the balcony of the Varney home to take a last look at his dead brother, nor did they hear him plead with the lovely Miss Varney to regard with sympathy the sorrowful and precarious duties of a secret servant. That speech is rather a good bit of sentimental argument, and Mr. Gillette presents it so convincingly that he is forgiven even by the highbrows. It is just a little fervid, perhaps, with its "roar and glory of battle" and its "death, alone, despised, forgotten." But as Mr. Chesterton remarks to Mr. Shaw, the soul of man becomes poetic in great crises, and Garnier did say to Robespierre when he coughed in his cold harangue, "The blood of Danton chokes you!"

At any rate, it seems that we all find absolution for Mr. Gillette's spy in this tender interview—so rhythmic, so vividly worded, so accurately punctuated, and so eloquently elocuted by Mr. Gillette. Hesitant, shy, earnest, impassioned he delivers what otherwise might be "well chosen words," with rare fidelity to the nature of the circumstance, convincing not only the lady to whom they are addressed, but the audience. His tense, quiet, sing song way of speech fits this passage admirably—and it is one of the pleasantest incidents of Mr. Gillette's play-writing and play-acting. As Miss Varney says, "He's just splendid"—if splendor be an attribute of a hero so mature.

Considering its age "Secret Service" holds together well. Its many situations occur fluently, with the comic and the tragic alternated effectively, if obviously, and all its tricks veneered with sincerity. Some of the circumstances seem not so agitating as they did fifteen years ago—as when Mr. Gillette in the telegraph office turns out the lights and does graceful things with his revolver in the creepy shadows. Of course this is the very thing that would betray him, but it is picturesque and thrilling if one doesn't stop to think. Some of the sentimental interludes, too, are a trifle maudlin, and the audience grows plainly impatient with the mournful old negro servant at times, though he is well acted by Mr. Charles Bradshaw. The rôle of Caroline Mitford allows Miss Josephine Brown to exhibit a delightful talent in comedy and she depicts the effervescent moods of that vivacious young chantress with certainty, be they grave or gay.

Perhaps the full effect of her powers of fascination is lessened a bit by a predilection to be conscious of herself and of her audience. This weakness is excusable, however, by the fact that "Secret Service" audiences like to be indulged in that manner. It is a spirited and lovely picture that Miss Brown makes, and the habit of easy retort provided for her by Mr. Gillette loses none of its savor in her bright personality. Miss Marion Abbott's versatile genius is applied in this performance to the rôle of the negro "mammy" and so well is it done that consultation with the play bill is necessary for her identification. Miss Louise Rutter, too, as the heroine, finds it easy to portray the emotions of that troubled lady without once stooping to tricks and affectations. They are all pretty good, though Mr. J. C. Miltern in his copious impersonation of the energetic villain permits his excitement at times to interfere with his articulation.

Mr. Bellew's Graceful Pilferer.

Melodrama of another fashion is visible at Powers', where Mr. Bellew has returned as Raffles, the elegant outlaw of Mr. Hornung's stories.

That suave recital of graceful adventure is repeated as expertly as ever, though, of course, the cast has undergone many changes since the first performances. Mr. E. M. Holland is absent, being about to appear as a thoughtful chieftain in an Indian drama in New York, and in his stead appears Mr. Frank Westerton as the deductive Capt. Bedford. Mr. Frank Conner, however, is again the loyal Bunny Manders, a rôle which suits his attractive individuality, and Mr. Frank McCormack is once more employed as Crayshaw, the burglar—a graphic piece of characterization if ever there was one. These three rôles and that of Mr. Bellew have skillful representation, and since they are of prime importance in the play the others do not much matter.

This does not mean precisely that Miss Gladys Hanson does not matter, for she does. But her impressive beauty is such that a recently acquired and unfortunate practice of showy diction does not interfere much with her romantic duties as the heroine. The same fault mars the impersonation of Mrs. Vidal by Miss Jane Tyrrell, whose comeliness is also great enough to hide a multitude of histrionic sins. Mr. Bellew is weary, no doubt, of having his performance of the agreeable kleptomaniac described as finished, but finished it is—a facile, effortless, flawless impersonation of one of the most picturesque characters of the minor drama. He is to play "Raffles" for two weeks at Powers', and then Mr. Belasco's "The Lily" will arrive, with Miss Nance O'Neill and Mr. Charles Cartwright in the leading rôles.

COURTENAY FOOTE IN "DISRAELI" AT THE GRAND.

Herr Von Possart in "Daughter of Fabricius."

"DIE TOCHTER DES FABRICIUS"
A Drama in Four Acts
BY DR. ADOLF WILBRANDT.
Presented in German at the Princess Theater by ERNST VON POISSART and His Company, the cast being as follows:

Eulenstein, a judge	Herr Jessen
Rolf, a manufacturer	Herr Pittschau
Frau Ida Reinhold	Fraulein De Lasky
Frau Agathe Stern	Fraulein Brunner
Hugo, her son	Klein Hamburger
Fabricius	Herr von Possart
Frau Wohlmut	Frau Eisemann
Demmler, Rolf's servant	Herr Omar
Abel, Rolf's gardener	Herr Bauer
Käthe	Fraulein Brockau
Fredericke, a glove maker	Fraulein Hamburger
A process server	Herr Kerb
A bailiff	Herr Eisemann

BY GLENN DILLARD GUNN.

GERMAN melodrama is painstakingly realistic, on occasion. It can assemble a series of perfectly obvious and extremely harrowing incidents and then underscore each, one of them with lurid stroke until there is nothing left for the imagination. Of such stuff is Wildbrandt's play, "The Daughter of Fabricius," Herr von Possart's third offering for the present week at the Princess theater. A large audience wept through its four acts last night and tearfully applauded the distinguished visitor.

While one may be permitted to regret the expenditure of such art as Herr von Possart commands on material of such slight worth, one is obliged to admire the remarkable completeness of his portrayal of the part of Fabricius. The spectacle of dishonored, broken age is so sadly familiar that he has had ample opportunity to study the rôle from life. Men do serve twenty-four years in prison and return to the world, broken in mind and body. It is easy to imagine that such an unfortunate would have the physical aspect with which Herr von Possart endows Fabricius. He presented him as a living death, white of face, with palsied hand and lusterless eye. Even his hair seemed dead. Equally convincing was the unfolding of the character. The timid, apologetic entrance, the fearfully hopeful approach to the philanthropic manufacturer, Rolf; the halting account of his prison term, with its pitiful show of pride in the good references given him by authorities, were deft touches that finished the picture of age, failure, and misfortune. There was an ever recurring accent of gentleness that completed and in a measure justified the author's subsequent overstatement of the case.

But the necessities of melodrama soon destroyed the restraint that so admirably sustained the illusion in the opening scenes, and the tearful climaxes that were piled one upon the other were as difficult to endure as they were to sustain. Had Herr von Possart enjoyed the support of actors who were less conscious of their obligation to act it is probable that the total result would have been less harrowing and far more sane. However, Fraulein Brünner conceived the part of the daughter as a kind of weeping chorus, while Herr Pittschau restrained his manly tears with evident difficulty.

Frau Eisemann again displayed her gifts for loquacious comedy, supplying with the assistance of Herr Bauer momentary relief to the all pervading gloom. However, the finale proved that there may be happy tears, and it is presumed that the audience supplied similar evidence.

Beebe-Dethier Recital.

Miss Caroline Beebe and Mr. Edouard Dethier gave their second recital of chamber music in the foyer of Orchestra hall yesterday forenoon. An appreciative audience listened with every manifestation of pleasure.

"First time" was bracketed with each selection on the program: Sonata in E flat minor, Bernard; Suite in F major, Reger, and Sonata in G major, Stojowski. As compositions the first and third numbers were mildly interesting, but the Reger suite was a spiritless composition, spiritedly played.

Of the playing as a whole it is possible to speak in terms of warmest praise. There was no effort for virtuosity, but a sincere and successful attempt to transmit the thought of the composer. In brief it was good ensemble.

"Baby Mine" Captures Londoners.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—"Baby Mine" was presented tonight at the Criterion theater. It went with a roar, which promised that the success of the piece would be as great here as in America. Weedon Grossmith, as Jimmy Jinks, was supported by a capital company. A majority of the critics admit that it would be useless to analyze or criticise such delightful absurdity, however hackneyed its original idea, and so they heartily join the audience in hilarious approval.

Woman and Her Interests.

Jolly Girls as Wives.

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY.

[Copyright, 1911, by Laura Jean Libbey.]

SOME men are wont to say, regarding a merry maid who always has a gay laugh on her ripe, red lips: "She's a jolly companion, but she wouldn't exactly suit me for a wife."

Such men do not appreciate the heaven of a sunny disposition. Who blames the babbling brook for dancing and laughing all its merry life as it rushes along? Is there more to admire in the silent, sullen stream that flows onward forever, without a ripple, content to follow the path marked out for it, radiating no sunshine, reflecting only shadows?

Many a man who passes a jolly girl by, for her more sedate companion, fails to realize what a sunbeam she would be in a home; how her merry laughter would echo in the rooms, which would grow to be a far sweeter sound in his ears than the notes of the happiest lark.

A jolly girl always has a sunny heart—a heart that always makes light of troubles, and inspires a man to look beyond the dark cloud for the silver lining which she is devoutly certain lies behind it.

A man's life is full of ups and downs, criss-crossed with happiness and sorrow. Happy is he who has a winsome, cheery wife who can smile with him in his brighter moods, and woo him into smiling in his melancholy hours of trials and tribulations.

A happy, smiling face across the table warms the cockles of a man's heart and sends him off to his daily duties with a tenderness in his soul. He knows that no matter how dark, cold, and dreary he may find the outside world, he will find sunshine at home.

The jolly girl, while given to being over witty in her single days, tones down considerably with wedlock. She is still light hearted and happy, but she can be sympathetic as well.

She is the wife who will never give herself up to brooding and making mountains out of mole hills. Her griefs are like April weather, even while the tears are in her eyes her lips will break into smiles.

The jolly girl can love as deeply as any other girl on earth. She does not put her lover on a pedestal to worship, as do graver women, but her heart responds as quick, if not quicker, to Cupid's first knock at its portal. The jolly girl is birdlike in her nature—she does not like a cage, even though it be gilded—she loves to flitter hither and thither, at her own sweet will, and the husband who understands her will not tie down her wings, expecting her to sing just as gayly.

Like the bird, she looks upon feathering the home nest as her true vocation—and looks upon the second and perhaps the third would-be mate who presents himself, until she sees the one to whom her heart goes out—and she will mate with him and no one else.

There is another point to be considered in favor of the jolly wife. Her children are sure to be merry elves, veritable sunbeams in the household, laughing, loving, and dancing through the years.

The man who has to sit at table with a sullen wife and still more sullen brood should not have sympathy wasted upon him. He ought to have read her disposition carefully ere wooing and wedding such a wife. Nor could he blame the little ones for inheriting her traits, no more than he could blame a certain tree for bearing crabapples. Even when the jolly girl has run her race as girl and woman she will be a graceful, jolly grandma. A pleasure to the household and a constant source of delight to the second generation.

She Was Rude.

"Dear Miss Libbey: Is or is it not proper for a young man to kiss a girl if he is not engaged to her? Also, what would you think of a girl if her sweetheart came up to see her and she had some friends there calling. She met him at the door and asked him if he would just as soon call the next evening instead. Would you say anything to her about it or let it pass? HARRY."

No girl should permit a man not a relative to kiss her unless she is engaged to him. I think the girl was rather rude to turn you away, but she had a right to do so, and it is not necessary for her to give an explanation.

He Is Exacting.

"Dear Miss Libbey: I am a girl of 20 with a liking for good times. While on my vacation this summer I made the acquaintance of a young man who lives in another city—so consequently cannot come to see me only about once in three months. We have corresponded since last summer, but are not really engaged, although we think quite a little of each other. Now what I would like to know is this: Do you think it wrong for me to go to the theater and other places of amusement once in a while with friends of mine? He thinks it very wrong for me to do this. Would certainly thank you very much for your advice in the matter. "KATE."

Until you agree to become his wife he has no right to control your actions, although it may be necessary for you to let him do so in unessential matters if you care enough for his approval to make the sacrifice.

A Telephone Mystery.

"Dear Miss Libbey: I am a young man about 22 years of age, fairly good looking, am working on the south side, have very long hours, and am a very good entertainer among the ladies. There has been a young lady calling me up and jollying me very much. Her voice to me sounds very charming. I have also jollied her along, but she will not give me her name. It has aroused my curiosity. I would very much like to meet her, but don't know how I can, therefore I am asking your advice. She has a charming voice. Kindly tell me what I should do. FORLORN."

If she wants to make your acquaintance she will tell you her name. In the meantime, she may make you wait longer if you show too great anxiety.

Bride's White Supper.

T. K. writes: "Will you please let me know through THE TRIBUNE if it is right for a wife to give a supper to her girl friends after she has been married two weeks. What kind of a supper would you suggest and should my husband be at home?"

In the case of her intimate girl friends a bride, or one about to become a bride, may do almost anything she chooses. It is her particular right at this time. It is quite a different question when it comes to formal affairs, but nowadays she also takes liberties with convention and custom, especially in giving postnuptial affairs. There is also a tendency, even in the most exclusive circles, and among those who would be most modish, to go back to older and simpler social ways, and to the doing of what the heart prompts.

It is a comparatively modern custom for the bride to seclude herself with her husband for a month or more. It is hardly a century since the two were often married more than a month before they had twenty-four hours of quietude, every sort of entertainment for them being the custom after they were married rather than before.

As to the husband being present, of course he should be, unless he is particularly timid and shy. If it is likely to be a real ordeal for him he may come in later with some of his young men friends. If he can enter heartily into the affair his presence will certainly add interest to the occasion, but if he cannot it is your part to excuse him as you would be excused. One of the old customs was for the bridegroom to wait on the table at his bridal feast. You can make this something of a bridal feast.

As for a little device for the supper, you might call it A "bride's bouquet supper." If you want to buy bride's roses for decorations of the table, giving each girl one as a souvenir, with some little card to show the occasion and date.

At any rate, no matter what your decorations, make it a white supper. Substitute anything that is to your taste or your convenience in the following menu:

Horseradish Sauce.
Celery Soup.
Stew of Hearts. Curry of Rice. Mashed Potatoes.
White Cherries (canned). Hot Rolls.
Bride's Cake. Ice Cream.
Coffee.

Have a simple little ring among the ingredients of the cake and invite each girl to draw lots in cutting her slice. Have the slices large enough so that they will cut the whole cake. The one who cuts upon the bride's ring, or gets it in her slice, is deemed sure of happiness for at least twelve months. There are other ideas for the ring, but I can give this one. Tie the knife which is to be used for the cutting with white ribbon.

MODEL METHODS ON UNION PACIFIC

System Perfected by Vice President Kruttschnitt to Be Adopted Abroad.

STAFF IS REORGANIZED.

Eight Units of Operation and Direction Feature of Railway Enterprise.

BY HOLLAND.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Word has just come from South Africa that the national railway system of Great Britain's colonies there is about to adopt the new methods of organization which have been perfected by Vice President Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation of the Union Pacific railway system, whose main office is in Chicago.

Mr. Kruttschnitt, when he received a day or two ago this information, must have felt that at last the mental inertia which he has sometimes said is characteristic of great corporations is speedily to end, at least so far as the organization of American railway systems is concerned.

For if one great system imitates the example set by another, as the system of South Africa has adopted the original work done by the Union Pacific in the way of reorganization of the staff, then it is to be presumed that some of the leading American railways will follow suit.

System with Eight Units.

Although only a little over two years have passed since E. H. Harriman and Mr. Kruttschnitt adopted this reorganization plan, having found expediency in the suggestion made by Maj. Charles Hine, who has long been on the staff of the Union Pacific's director of maintenance and operation, yet the results already obtained have been even more satisfactory than were deemed probable at the time the plan was adopted.

For example, approximately 500,000 letters were last year eliminated from the correspondence carried on by officials and subordinates of the Union Pacific with other officers and subordinates, and it is expected that within another year an amount of correspondence once again as large will have been further eliminated.

This reorganization of the road has made it possible completely to perfect eight units of operation and direction, each under a vice president and general manager, all of whom are under Mr. Kruttschnitt of Chicago. These units are the Union Pacific at Omaha, the Oregon Short Line at Salt Lake City, the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company, which is divided into three districts, with a vice president and a general manager at Portland, Seattle, and Spokane, the Southern Pacific at San Francisco, the Arizona Eastern and Southern Pacific of Mexico, at Tucson, and the Sunset-Central line at Houston, Tex.

Where Offices Are Located.

At Omaha, Portland, and Seattle the unit system has been adopted in the general offices, and so far there have been twenty-three railway divisions placed under the new system.

When a little over two years ago Maj. Hine, in brief consultation with Mr. Kruttschnitt at Portland, Ore., suggested certain fundamental features of a reorganization of the whole Union Pacific system, he did not think it probable that Mr. Kruttschnitt would act as speedily as he did upon the suggestion. With that intuitive capacity for grasping some of the greater problems of railway management which has caused Vice President Kruttschnitt to be termed by some of our own railway managers the Von Moltke of American railways, he accepted Maj. Hine's plan after perhaps no more than fifteen minutes' presentation of it; and Mr. Harriman, with that power of instant decision which was characteristic of him, gave the plan his approval as soon as it was presented to him by Mr. Kruttschnitt and Maj. Hine.

A few weeks later Maj. Hine was at the general offices at Chicago and discovered that Vice President Kruttschnitt had already put a portion of the plan in operation in the general offices. This reorganization has now been carried so far that Mr. Kruttschnitt at Chicago with his staff handles with ease 18,000 miles of railway, utilizing a single consolidated office file to do this.

Would Modify Old System.

One of the fundamental evils of modern railway organization has been the fact that so many subordinates, chief clerks, and clerks are permitted, even directed, to sign communications presumably issued by their superiors, many of which the superiors never see. It often happens, therefore, that a $1,500 clerk will write instructions to one of the higher executive officers, and this has always been a source of humiliation. One purpose of the Hine-Kruttschnitt plan was to put an end to this custom in the Union Pacific.

There are three principal features of the reorganization plan so far as it affects all division officers. The first of these features is that there must always be an assistant superintendent in charge of a division office. Second, that no one shall be permitted to sign a communication of instruction, advice, or any other except the man whose name is signed to this communication. No one is permitted to sign, for instance, for the assistant superintendent. Third, the clerks and all others are instructed to address communications impersonally, that is to say, to the office and not to the individual.

All division officers in charge of general division offices are given the uniform title of assistant superintendent. This puts every one on equality so far as titles are concerned. It was early discovered that this equalization of titles fostered a spirit of cooperation and instead of tending to suppress individuality served to increase the sense of individual influence, association, and publicity through lack of envy and jealousy and from the feeling that each man stood on an equality with every other.

Dispense with Long Used Titles.

The grade of assistant general manager has also been created. This makes it possible to dispense with long used titles. For instance, the titles of general superintendent or of chief engineer and superintendent of motive power, or of superintendent of transportation, are given up and these officers are each given the title of assistant general manager, again placing them upon an equality.

When the new general office now under construction at Omaha is completed all of the general operating offices of the Union Pacific system will be consolidated there. The reorganization has in one respect followed the example set by the courts of many of the states. The Union Pacific has now consolidated into one office what heretofore has been a large number of independent offices of records. Into this one office are consolidated the files so that perfect system and orderly arrangement of recording and filing are thereby secured.

CATTLE PRICES ARE WEAKER

Sheep and Lambs Also Lower; Buyers Hold an Advantage.

HOGS ALONE ARE FIRMER.

Sell 5c to 10c Higher on the Strength of Disappointing Receipts.

Buyers held the advantage in the market for live stock at Chicago yesterday and lower prices were made for cattle, sheep, and lambs. Hogs alone showed firmness, selling at an advance of 5@10c on the strength of disappointing receipts and a brisk demand for fresh pork products. Killing operations at the leading packing houses were suspended at midday on account of the holiday, and this afforded packers an opportunity to exert bearish pressure after they had secured sufficient stock to keep their butchers busy the few working hours that they were employed. Lambs suffered most from this cause and closed at a decline of 15@25c from opening figures. Native steers sold at a loss of largely 10@15c from Monday's prices and topped at $6.90, against $7.05 that day. Hogs reached an extreme high point of $7.65.

CATTLE.

Having no urgent requirements to meet packers used the approaching Lenten season as a club to pound prices and had little difficulty in convincing holders that higher prices were not in order in spite of the light movement of cattle from nearby feed lots. A few shipping orders were filled early at steady figures, but the trade did not get into full swing until nearly noon, and by that time sellers were willing to accept 10@15c lower prices to effect sales.

Concessions failed to attract a much broader demand, however, and the market was exceedingly slow and weak to the finish, a condition which was decidedly disappointing in the face of fresh receipts of only 17,000 head. Cows were shown a little favor early and opened on a steady to strong basis. They reacted later, however, and closed at a net loss of 10c. Bulls held steady, while calves finished in a depressed condition, although sales of fancy, assorted vealers were made at up to $9.40@9.50 at the outset. Quotations:

Beef steers, good to choice	$6.00@6.90
Beef steers, common to good	5.00@6.00
Beef cows, good to choice	3.75@5.80
Fat heifers, good to choice	3.85@5.50
Heifers selected	5.50@6.00
Canners and cutters	2.25@3.50
Calves, common to choice heavy	3.50@6.00
Feeding steers	4.75@5.50
Good to prime veals	8.50@9.50
Stock steers	3.00@5.50
Bulls	3.60@5.40

HOGS.

Packers, shippers and butchers wanted hogs, and although individual orders did not call for heavy purchases fresh receipts of only 28,000 head were scarcely large enough to meet aggregate requirements. Prices opened at an advance of 5c from Tuesday's best figures, and most of the day's supply cleared at this appreciation, with occasional sales at an advance of 10c and the top price for the day 7½c higher than on the foregoing session.

The extreme late close of the market was weak, with values about 5c lower than at the opening, but practically all of the hogs had changed hands before this weakness developed and only 2,000 head were left unsold at the finish. Packers secured a total of 21,700 head, paying $7.25@7.40 for the bulk of their droves, while shippers bought 8,000 at up to $7.50@7.65 for prime butchers and fancy lightweights. Quotations:

Bulk of sales	$7.25@7.40
Common to good mixed	7.20@7.35
Fair to choice medium weights	7.30@7.45
Fair to choice butchers	7.25@7.45
Select 200@300 lb packing	7.25@7.40
Fancy shippers	7.40@7.65
Common to choice lightweights	7.40@7.60
Boars, according to weight	5.50@4.00
Stags	7.25@7.65
Pigs	7.50@7.75

SHEEP.

Early estimates made receipts 20,000 head and the market opened on a steady basis, with packers making unreserved purchases at Tuesday's best figures. During this period of activity fancy lightweight fed wethers sold at $4.85, the high price of the year, and prime light lambs made $6.40, which was as high as paid at any time the foregoing session. Late trains carried a big proportion of live muttons, however, and estimates on the day's supply were revised to 25,000 head before more than half of the receipts had been disposed of.

Native ewes	$3.00@4.50
Fed ewes	3.25@4.65
Fed wethers	4.00@4.85
Native wethers	3.75@4.65
Bucks	2.50@3.25
Yearlings	4.50@5.65
Native lambs	5.25@6.25
Fed lambs	5.75@6.40
Clipped lambs	5.00@6.00

Speaker Adkins Says There Will Be No Great Opposition to Measure in Legislature.

Moline, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—That the Landee road bill for state control of highways will be passed at this section of the legislature is the prediction of Speaker Charles Adkins of the house.

The Landee road bill is considered one of the big measures before this session. Representative Thomas Campbell of this district will introduce the bill.

Mr. Adkins today spoke at the Moline retail merchants' banquet, making a plea for a 50 per cent recall instead of the 25 per cent measure now up before the house.

Argentina Said to Have Been Promised Features of American Vessels.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Senator La Follette today introduced in the senate two resolutions which seek to prevent the alleged disclosure of United States Naval secrets to other countries. He demands that the senate receive information from the departments of state and navy concerning the contracts which private shipbuilding concerns received from the Argentine republic for the construction of two battleships and whether administration officials were responsible for the procuring of this business.

Among the criticisms or the manner of bringing these contracts to the United States the charge was printed today that Secretary of State Knox, through communications to American Minister Sherrill at Buenos Aires, influenced the situation by guaranteeing up-to-date men of war through the use of secret devices as to equipment which are used in building vessels in the United States.

Demand for Many Papers.

One of Senator La Follette's resolutions directs the secretary of state to send to the senate any communications between officials of his department and representatives of the Argentine government pertaining to the construction and armament of the two battleships in question.

The other resolution demands communications between the navy department and private shipyards.

The naval appropriation bill passed the house this morning. The advocates of one battleship instead of two were defeated.

Steel Man Denies Report.

Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 22.—Relative to the charges that the Bethlehem Steel company is guilty of various acts to deceive naval inspectors, an official of the company today said the matter was an echo of the charges made during the company's strike here last March by leaders and organizers of the striking employés. The charges were not substantiated then.

MORE INTEREST IN DRY GOODS AROUSED BY NEW YORK SALE.

Buyers Turn to Embroidery Market as Result of Heine Offerings—Quiet in Wholesale District.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—In the dry good market the interest of buyers is quickened by an extensive sale of embroideries inaugurated by Arnold B. Heine & Co. The sale brought into the market a number of buyers representing department store trade, jobbers, and cutters-up. General interest in white goods is manifesting itself, as prices of staple and specialty lines are being well maintained. The majority of buyers feel it wise for them to cover their forward requirements at ruling prices.

General observance of Washington's birthday made the market quiet in wholesale trade. With the exception of a few importers and one or two jobbing houses, that were obliged to get out rush orders, the wholesale district remained closed. There are present in the market a few important buyers representing department store cloth buyers interested in supplementing their stocks of dress goods. Spots which they are seeking to purchase include serges, chiffon, broadcloths, and some novelty suitings in woolens and worsteds. On heavy cottons it is reported in this market that few large buyers, whether representing export interests, cutters up, or converters, are willing to operate. They regard the firmness with which sellers are holding their stocks as a condition which cannot long be maintained and are determined to withhold orders for the time being.

At the close of business Tuesday brokers declared they were able to put through during the day some business on spots in narrow odds on a basis of 3⅞c on 28 inch 64x90s. There was some unevenness in quotations on narrow odds in 26 and 27 inch weaves and constructions suitable for printing purposes. Fair sale is being made on spot offerings of wide standards at 5¼c where goods are from southern mills, and 5¼c is the price asked by agents for spots of eastern construction. On all of the high count wide goods available for converting purposes the mills are holding out for steadier prices. Few of the factors in this division of the market are willing to engage in work for delivery beyond April, where they cannot get their own prices. Goods above 80x80s are selling on a basis of not less than 14½c cotton.

Supply Dealers Re-Elect Head.

HAFFETT & PHOTO.

CHARLES J. WARNER.

Charles Warner of Wilmington, Del., yesterday reelected president of the National Builders' Supply association at the close of the organization's twelfth annual convention in Chicago, is the youngest man ever at the head of that body. He is only 33 years old. Mr. Warner is of the sixth generation of Warners in Wilmington who have engaged in the sale and manufacture of builders' supplies.

TRADE BODIES CALLED LEGAL

Speaker Tells Builders' Supply Men They Can Organize.

SHERMAN LAW A "BOGIE."

Says Business Men's Associations Are Not Violations of Act.

Tentative plans for the amalgamation of the state retail lumber dealers' organizations and organizations of the dealers in masons' supplies and dealers in builders' supplies into a proposed national organization with delegate representation were discussed yesterday afternoon by a committee composed of representatives of the different bodies. Later these plans will be submitted to the different organizations for consideration.

The consideration of the proposition formed a part of the closing program of the National Builders' Supply association, which had been in session two days at the Congress hotel.

Rights of business men of the United States to combine in trade associations were upheld before the convention of the builders' by Charles D. Joslyn, former corporation counsel of Detroit. He held that these associations, as operated today, do not infringe upon the Sherman anti-trust law, and are beyond control of the government or states.

Reviews Activity in Litigation.

Mr. Joslyn, reviewing a dozen years of activity in trade association litigation, mentioned pending litigation in the Supreme court, where it is sought to dissolve the Mississippi and Louisiana Retail Lumber Dealers' association.

Acting on his opinion, the supply dealers, who have been acting as a voluntary association, voted to incorporate their body.

"Ever since the passage of the Sherman law in 1890 business men the country over have been fearful of consequences of combining with each other for any purpose, and in many lines they have refrained from united action, even for the most beneficent and lawful purposes," he said. "Their fears are groundless and they are quite safe in organizing on established lines."

Blames Price Wars on Ignorance.

William A. Jordan of Wilmington, Del., spoke on his experiences as a controller and auditor for corporations.

"America's business men enter into price cutting wars which lead to bankruptcy because of willful ignorance," he said. "They do not know how much it costs them to do business."

He declared all men engaged in business should join in adopting a uniform system of figuring the cost of doing business.

Convention Closes with Banquet.

The convention closed with a banquet at night at which Ninian H. Welch and George T. Buckingham were the principal speakers.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Charles Warner, Wilmington, Del.; treasurer, H. H. Classen, Baltimore; executive committee, Richard Kind, Toledo, O.; R. C. Brown, Oshkosh, Wis.; Walter Jahncke, New Orleans; James G. Lincoln, Boston. Vice presidents were elected from each of the twenty-eight states represented.

ONE UNION WINS; RIVAL ON STRIKE

Plumbers Start Jurisdictional Fight When Steamfitters Get Pay Raise.

FAIL TO BLOCK NEW PACT.

Employers Threaten a Lockout Like 1900 Unless Organizations Make Peace.

Jurisdictional fights between rival labor unions were renewed yesterday. This time it is a fight by the plumbers' union against the steamfitters' union, because the latter was successful in negotiating a wage settlement with the employers.

The plumbers' officials called a strike in all "combination" shops, affecting about twenty places in which both plumbers and steamfitters are employed.

Simon O'Donnell and other business agents of the plumbers' union also threaten to extend the war against the employers and the rival steamfitters' union until all trades affiliated with the Chicago Building Trades council are involved. O'Donnell is president of the council.

This threat took the form of an ultimatum to the employers that a general strike of building trades crafts will be called next week unless the members of the rival union of steamfitters are discharged and steamfitters in the plumbers' union substituted.

Employers Threaten Lockout.

As a result, contractors threaten to bring on a lockout similar to the one in 1900, unless the unions patch up their internal differences before the spring activity begins.

A new wage agreement signed on Monday by officers of the Chicago Master Steamfitters' association, the Heating and Ventilating engineers, and the officials of the Steamfitters' Protective association, local No. 2 of the International association, was the direct cause of this new strike.

The agreement runs for four years, from April 1, 1911, and by it 750 men get increases in pay. From the beginning of the contract to April 1, 1912, the scale will be 70 cents an hour, or $5.60 a day; for the second year the scale will be 72 cents an hour, or $5.76 a day, and for the succeeding years 75 cents an hour, or $6 a day. Under the old agreement, which expires April 1, the scale is 68¾ cents an hour, or $5.50 a day.

Try to Block Agreement.

Efforts were made by President O'Donnell and Business Agents Thomas Kearney and James Garvin of the plumbers' union to block the agreement. Back of the fight is the charge that the steamfitters' union no longer is "simon pure," because it recently was ousted from the building trades department. The plumbers are forming a "dual" union of steamfitters.

PIT BOSS PROVOKES STRIKE.

Spring Valley, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Six hundred miners employed by the Illinois Third Vein company at Ladd struck today against Pit Boss Brown because he used discourteous language to the miners' committee while in session settling a labor grievance.

FINISHED STEEL TRADE GOOD

Demand in Various Lines of Industry Is Sustained.

CAST IRON PIPE IS ACTIVE.

Northwestern's Rail Order for 40,000 Tons Is Largest.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Iron Age will say today:

"The developments of the last week support the view that the buying movement in finished material which started in mid-January is not a mere rebound from the extremely restricted buying of the closing week of 1910. The rate at which new orders have been taken this month by the leading interest is greater than that of January.

"At the same time, shipments have increased probably 20 per cent, with the larger scale of mill operations in all lines. To those who consult only the residue of unfilled orders at the end of the month the figures for February will need to be interpreted in the light of the two favorable factors—an enlarged demand for future shipment and an increased current consumption; one tending to increase and the other to reduce the unfilled total. Railroads are better buyers than is currently credited.

Good Buying of Track Supplies.

"Buying of track supplies has been excellent. The Lake Shore has closed for 24,000 kegs of spikes and 5,000 kegs of track bolts. Frogs and switch works are running fuller and electric railroad buying both for rails and supplies is much more of a factor. The Manchurian railway has placed 1,000 tons of frogs and switches in this country. The lighter finished lines continue to lead in activity. Wire and tin plate mills are running to 90 per cent of capacity.

Cast Iron Pipe Active.

"Cast iron pipe usually a criterion of influences operating broadly in the iron market, has been quite active and a large tonnage is pending for municipalities and corporations. The leading maker took a 5,000 ton contract at Chicago of 6 to 12 inch pipe. Milwaukee is in the market for 10,000 tons.

"A Canadian mill which bought 15,000 tons of open heath billets from Gary in January has taken an additional 10,000 tons. At a Pittsburg meeting of twenty billet and sheet bar makers Feb. 17 an advance was favored by some companies, but no action was taken. One large interest is limiting sales at present prices to the first quarter. The pig iron market is firmer, particularly in the central west. At a meeting of the furnace interests at Cleveland, Feb. 17, the outlook was reported more favorable, particularly in basic iron, which Valley furnaces are now generally holding at $14. At Cincinnati sales of basic amounting to 25,000 tons are reported, deliveries in one case extending through their requirements for the second half. For that delivery furnaces are asking 50 cents advance and sales of southern No. 2 iron are reported at $11.50, Birmingham, fo rthe third quarter."

BUSSE ORDERS POLICE TO STOP ERECTION OF PHONE POLES.

Illinois Tunnel Company Has 250 Men at Work on North Side—Concern Offended Before in Kenwood.

Mayor Busse learned yesterday that the Illinois Tunnel company was erecting telephone poles in the Twenty-first and Twenty-second wards contrary to provisions of the city ordinances. He immediately ordered the police department to stop the work.

Ald. Francis Taylor, Sergt. Llenenkugel, and three policemen found more than 250 men at work on the north side south of North avenue.

Under the ordinances the Illinois Telephone company wires must be conveyed in conduits and pole lines are permitted only in a few outlying districts.

PLAN HARD FIGHT ON MAIL HAULAGE

Roads' Protests for More Pay to Be Presented to Postal Authorities.

282 LINES REPRESENTED.

Committee Speaks for Practically All of the Mileage in the United States.

Protests on behalf of the railroads of the country against the present system of paying the roads for carrying the United States mails are to be presented shortly to the postal authorities. The case of the roads will be set forth, probably, by a delegation of officials before officials of the postoffice department at Washington or a committee of congress.

The claims of the roads are in many ways the same as those that have been presented in previous years, that they are being paid inadequately for the service performed, but this year they will be based on a comprehensive report made by a committee on railway mail pay which has gathered statistics from practically all the roads which handle mail.

The committee represents 282 roads, operating 208,526 miles of line, or practically all of the railway mileage of the country.

Three Recommendations Are Made.

The roads will present arguments on three recommendations made by the mail pay committee in its report, which has been sent to all of the roads. The recommendations are:

That authority be given the postmaster general to allow compensation for apartment cars; that relief be given for performing messenger service between the railroad stations and the postoffices on short line routes; and that adjustment be made annually of the weight of mail carried per day and payments made accordingly.

The roads are now paid, in addition to the tonnage rates, for the use of special postal cars over forty feet in length, but not for the smaller apartment cars, of which there are about 3,800, as compared with 1,400 postoffice cars, and they claim they should be paid for the space required for the mail as well as for the weight, on the ground that about twenty-two tons of car weight is required to handle three tons of mail, on account of the space required for sorting, etc. They say that 90 per cent of their present pay is only for the weight and that they receive but 10 per cent for space.

Want Pay for Deliveries.

Regarding the messenger service, the roads believe they should be paid for delivering mail from their cars to the postoffices, which they are required to do on small mail routes, but their strongest protest is against the present system of fixing the compensation by weighing the mail once in four years. With an estimated increase of 6 per cent each year, the railroads assert they are carrying this increased weight of mail at their own expense, thus furnishing to the government nearly $3,000,000 worth of service per year without compensation.

Aims at Baggage Safety.

The Northwestern railway has inaugurated a special campaign among its employés to increase the safety and prompt handling of baggage. The general baggage agent has just placed in use a new form of tag to be attached to lost articles or baggage found by employés, giving complete instructions so that an employé of any department will know exactly where to turn in the article to insure its most speedy return to the owner.

This, it is believed, will systematize the handling of articles left by passengers in the cars.

TRADERS ANXIOUS FOR CABLE NEWS

Weak Markets Abroad Over Holiday Here Against Wheat Holders.

CANADIAN GRAIN FEARED

Corn Dealers Concede That Farmers Hold the Key to Action in Prices.

While several thousand men, women, and children occupied the board of trade floor during the Wednesday trade holiday listening to a musical program which came to an end with a speech to the "boy scouts" by Theodore Roosevelt, there was more than the usual holiday interest in what was going on in foreign markets. There were also considered the probabilities of the action likely to take place in the grain trade today.

Liverpool Cable Lower.

The only reliable indication which traders on the curb and in offices had to consider was the action in prices at Liverpool. The greatest interest was in wheat. The Tuesday market here was marked by a strong rebound in prices.

Everybody was eager to know whether the English market would follow the bull lead. The cable proved disappointing to those hoping for relief from recent depression in prices.

The 1:30 p. m. cable was steady to ⅛d lower and the closing cable gave a flat decline of ¼d in wheat futures, one private message claiming ½d loss in the March price. The Liverpool corn market also weakened and was quoted at ¼d loss for the day. This weakness abroad in the two leading cereals following a strong and higher closing in both wheat and corn is likely to precipitate a fresh selling campaign in all markets on this side.

Bearish Features in Sight.

What makes such action all the more probable was the easier feeling displayed at Winnipeg over the holiday, wheat price there showing heaviness and a little decline in sympathy with Liverpool.

Dispatches from that Canadian trading point refer to increased country offerings of wheat, and a disposition to concentrate stocks at shipping points possibly with a view of forcing the grain to American markets in case of speedy and favorable action on the reciprocity measure before the senate.

Influence of Reciprocity.

To date the influence of the entire reciprocity agitation has been bearish. Almost violent decline in prices at northwest markets has been recorded since the joint commission made its report and President Taft urged the passage of the measure by congress.

Back of the surface indications and the active liquidation by holders there has been a quiet holding back on the part of buyers in the cash wheat trade, and such stagnation among buyers of flour that the result has been most depressing in the open markets.

Should the present congress fail to pass the measure permitting free Canadian wheat, the effect for a short time at least might be to stimulate market support and revive activity among waiting buyers.

Corn Raisers Will Rule.

Corn traders are ready to concede that corn raisers can rule the market for a time. Of late there has been both depression and dullness. Decline in wheat has taken a couple of cents off corn futures. Bears have had help from a liberal movement to market. Now it is reported that the late run of corn was largely from country elevators and that farmers are not free sellers.

Another important factor comes to the surface, the fact that stocks here and in the visible supply have made no such increase as expected. It is argued that the approach of the busy farm season will prove a check on country offerings until the next crop is planted. As a partial offset to this bullish news for the trade comes the report that recent rains have greatly helped the late corn acreage in Argentina and this is already reflected in the easier Liverpool market.

Light U. K. Supplies.

Recent issue of the Liverpool Corn Trade News contains this on wheat supplies for English ports. It says:

"Regarding the United Kingdom particularly the situation is not without elements of strength, stocks are being steadily reduced, and as recent buying has been on a moderate scale prospective shipments are likely to be on the light scale, as indeed they have been for some weeks past. How small the United Kingdom purchases have been lately is, perhaps, not quite realized, but the following statement will bring it home to every one. Weekly shimpents of wheat and flour during the last six weeks:

Week ending—	U. K. direct. Qrs.	Continent direct. Qrs.
Jan. 2	185,000	585,000

IN THE FOREIGN STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Money was dearer today. Discount rates were easy. Traders on the stock exchange were occupied with the settlement. Carry over rates were tighter, and in the American section the small account was arranged at 4¼ per cent. The bulk of the new business was centered in home rails at higher prices. Foreign bonds and rubber shares had a good tone, but Kaffirs were flat. American securities were dull with prices a fraction over parity. Canadian Pacific was an exception and closed at an advance of 1¼ points.

EGG BOARD NOT IN SESSION.

Live chickens at Chicago yesterday sold at 15c a lb, the highest price touched since last summer, and showing a net advance of 1@2c since the close last week. This upturn in prices of chickens was the only variation made in values of staple produce during the day. Butter and egg merchants observed the Washington holiday and there was no session of the board. A fresh supply of 1,600 cases of strawberries came from Louisiana and caused a sharp break in the price of this fruit here. Green vegetable trade was moderately active, with prices showing no important changes.

SHADING OF FUTURE PRICES IS MADE BY MAINE PACKERS.

Some Do Good Business, but There Still Remains Liberal Amount of Corn Orders to Be Booked.

Shading of the prevailing future price quotations on 1911 pack Maine corn is already in evidence, some of the smaller packers showing seeming eagerness to get business at 87½c, Portland, for standard No. 3, as against the 92½@90c, Portland, being asked by the larger packers for unlabeled stock.

Some of the principal packers have done a good business at the opening prices, but there still remains considerable business to be booked, on which competition is quite keen.

The market in the east is decidedly stronger on spot sweet potatoes, for which 85c, f. o. b. Baltimore, is being asked for No. 3 standard by most of the packers.

Future spinach is being quoted in the same market at 95c per dozen for No. 3 standard, and $3.00 per dozen for No. 10, delivery to be as soon as packed.

February Quotations in New York Reach 17 and 18 Cents a Dozen for Fresh Product.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Thanks to the unprecedented activity of the American men, there is good news at last for the poor consumer. In the last week fresh eggs have fallen to 17 and 18 cents a dozen, which is said to be the record low price for February in forty-one years.

One of the largest retail dealers in the city is offering fresh eggs at 20 cents a dozen, which is 6 cents less than wholesale and 10 cents less than the retail price of fresh eggs at this time last year.

Another dealer, with an eye for advertising his other wares, has been selling cold storage eggs at 10 and 8 cents a dozen to customers buying 50 cents' worth of other goods, with the understanding that all eggs of a questionable character will be replaced with good ones. The prospect, according to authorities on the egg trade, is for a fall in price to 15 cents a dozen for fresh eggs before March 1.

Chicago Horse Market.

A brisk volume of business was transacted in horses. There were several orders here calling for liberal shipments of heavy drafters and medium weight workers to eastern traders, and local buyers were in search of desirable farm mares and agricultural chunks for shipment to nearby country consumers. Receipts were of liberal volume, making an aggregate of 2,438 head for three days this week, against 1,729 head a week ago, and the general quality of the offerings was good. Sales were made at up to $300.00 for fancy extremely heavy draft animals, and at $190.00@225.00 for good medium weight workers.

CHARGES OF MANIPULATION AGAINST CARNEGIE TRUST MAN

W. J. Cummins of Nashville Alleged to Have Obtained Large Loans as Result of Juggling His Nashville Interests.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 22.—That W. J. Cummins, former director of the defunct Carnegie Trust company of New York, manipulated his interests in Nashville in order to obtain large loans from the Manhattan institution is one of the charges made in connection with the involuntary assignment of the Tennessee Packing and Live Stock company, of which Cummins was the head.

The extent of Mr. Cummins' alleged manipulations was not specifically brought out in the hearing over the receivership.

One of the things brought out at the hearing was contained in a paper filed by Supt. Cheney of the New York department of banks, in which he declares the three petitioners who threw the Nashville concern into bankruptcy are not bona fide creditors, but are bank clerks, and that notes against the packing company on which they took action were transferred to them without consideration. It is likely another receiver will be appointed to act with one already named in response to Supt. Cheney's request.

SALARY LOANS.

I APPRECIATE ACCOUNTS OF HONORABLE people [men employed, or in business, ladies with allowances from their husbands or incomes from other sources], who, while not in a position to borrow money from a bank, realize that exorbitant interest charged by professional money lenders is high and extortionate. I am connected with the Indiana Loan, Credit & Trust Company of Chicago, co-partners, 4303 Grand-blvd., and, having private means of my own, I am willing to loan money with or without security at a consideration but a trifle above bank rates, and never more than the interest legalized by the states of Massachusetts and Rhode Island; the precise rate being determined by the amount loaned and risk assumed. My location [15 minutes from loop district via South Side Elevated] assures a privacy not possible to those who deal with brokers in downtown office buildings, where lenders congregate. Always best to telephone Drexel 54 for private appointment. Ask for MR. S

The New Edition (the 11th) of the

Encyclopaedia Britannica

Is Now on Exhibition in Chicago

The Press of the University of Cambridge (England)

Has opened western headquarters in the Steger Building, Wabash Ave. and Jackson Blvd., so that those who have expressed interest in the new (11th) edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica can see the books themselves, and examine the widely discussed India (or Bible) paper format.

The use of India paper for so large a book as the Encyclopaedia was a revolutionary step, decided on only after repeated tests and experiments. Popular approval has been quick to endorse the judgment of the publishers. India paper reduces the bulk of each volume from 2¾ inches to 1 inch, and the weight in similiar proportion. A volume of this new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica can be held easily in one hand, while being read, and this in spite of the fact that each volume contains about 1,000 pages.

The University of Cambridge has Taken Over the Copyright

The Encyclopaedia Britannica has passed into the keeping of the University of Cambridge. It is being issued simultaneously in the United States, England, Canada, Australia, India and Africa.

In the recent history of the ancient universities nothing is more significant than the spirit which would enlarge the range of their activity. The institution by Cambridge University of extension lectures is but one sign of the desire to recognize a responsibility beyond the immediate circle of its own pupils during the short years of their studentship. Learning is no longer a heritage from which only a select few are deemed capable of profiting, and Cambridge does not hold back from the needs of a new day. The Encyclopaedia Britannica, 11th edition, presents, for reading or for reference, the best that scholarship can offer in every province of knowledge. It is fitting that such a book should come to the English speaking peoples from one of their ancient homes of learning.

For 140 years the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been the World's Standard Reference Work.

A novel and important feature of the new edition is the simultaneous production of the entire work, which will be issued complete within a period of about three months. The following is a list of the 11 successive editions:

First edition	3 volumes,	1768-71	Sixth edition	20 volumes,	1816-24
Second "	10 "	1777-84	Seventh "	22 "	1830-42
Third "	18 "	1788-97	Eighth "	22 "	1853-61
Supplement	2 "	1801	Tenth { 9th ed.	25 vols.,	1875-89
Fourth ed.	20 "	1801-10	Tenth { Supp't	11 "	1902
Fifth "	20 "	1810-17	Eleventh ed. {	28 " and Index	1911
Supplement	6 "	1816-24

Of the twenty or more notable encyclopaedias published in various countries since the first issue of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, some never attained to a second edition, and only "Brockhaus" can claim a continued existence of more than fifty years, if we except "Ersch and Grueber," projected in 1813, and still incomplete. The current (14th) edition of "Brockhaus" contains 16 million words as against 40 million in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The New Edition Supersedes and Excels all Previous Editions

The new Encyclopaedia Britannica has been built on original lines, upon a new foundation, with new contributors, thousands of new articles and new methods of treatment—comprehensiveness combined with brevity, exhaustive exposition of major subjects with greater facility of reference in the case of minor ones. It contains 40,000 articles (as against less than 17,000 in the Ninth edition), written by some 1,500 contributors of the highest authority, under the direction of an exceptionally large and efficient editorial staff. The editorial cost alone—the sum paid to contributors, editors, and editorial assistants during eight years—has been $815,000, more than twice the literary cost ($300,000) of the Ninth edition.

The 1,500 contributors to the Encyclopaedia Britannica (11th edition) are authorities of international reputation and recognized as the greatest experts in their own fields. The possessor of the new edition will therefore have something more than the best available information. The pages of the work abound with information derivable from no other source—and never before published—the material of books yet to be written, in advance of the knowledge upon which the next generation will base its activities and shape its conclusions.

The Low Price and Terms of Payment

In assuming control of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press regarded its sale at a low price as an inherent characteristic of the undertaking. To place the work within reach of the greatest number of readers, by naming the lowest price, was, in their estimation, to be accounted an essential element of their trust. For the moment, at any rate, they are satisfied that, in the advance offer, this part of their obligation is fulfilled to the utmost. They believe that, in respect of cheapness, no publication whatever is comparable with the 11th edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica at the "advance" price.

To still further facilitate its purchase, terms of payment have been established which permit the purchaser to extend his payments over 4, 6, 8, or 12 months.

Since publication of the introductory announcement in November last over 15,000 applications for sets have been received in New York and London.

Until publication is complete, applications will be accepted at the "advance-of-publication" price. Orders will be entered as received, and filled in rotation. Owing to the steadily increasing demand for this new edition, prompt action in entering your order is more than ever important. You are not required to make any payment until your complete set is delivered.

You are invited to call in person to inspect the various styles of binding; or, if you prefer, complete information, specimen pages and illustrations will be sent by mail upon application.

Cambridge University Press employs no agents or canvassers, and any person making such representation does so without authority.
